New Military Code Ordered Posted In Armed Services

By C. YATES McDANIEL
WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Defense Wilson today ordered the new code of military honor "posted prominently" by every American unit, ship and post throughout the world.

At the same time, he told the three services that it is "vital" without delay to develop plans and start "immediately" training American military men how to avoid capture and how to withstand captivity.

The code of conduct, proclaimed by President Eisenhower Wednesday, is designed to inspire American fighting men in combat and to strengthen their mental and physical fortitudes of the type used by the Communists in Korea. Wilson's orders to make it effective were contained in three strongly worded memoranda, to the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Forces; the Joint Chiefs of Staff; and Asst. Secretary of Defense Chief L. Burgess, maneuver chief and chairman of the committee which drafted the code.

Each service was directed to draw up its own plans for educating and indoctrinating its men. No time limit was fixed, but Wilson directed that even before it starts, each man be "thoroughly grounded in the salient features" of the code.

He called for support not only from the military but from civilian groups and other government agencies to aid in "dispelling the clouds of mystery and dread of the unknown which has surrounded Communist strategy and ideology." He told Burgess to seek such help from labor, industrial and agricultural groups and the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Religious and civilian organizations can also help in preparing servicemen for the ordeals of combat or captivity, Wilson said, because moral character and a firm belief in the American way of life are largely formed before a man puts on a uniform.

Wilson declared that this moral training must be emphasized both before and after a man enters military service because there was much "disturbing evidence" that American prisoners in Korea lacked ability to combat and withstand Communist distortions.

On the military side, he directed that preliminary instruction be given all servicemen about the international conditions which "make necessary this restatement and reaffirmation" of historic American principles.

Although Wilson left it to the services to work out the basic forms of their education and training programs, he spelled out certain goals that the programs must achieve.

He said every man must be specifically trained "to cope with enemy efforts against him." A "very important" part of this is implanting "basic truths and advantages of our democratic institutions and the fallacies of communism."

Strong, effective leadership and loyalty to group and unit "must be fostered by every means," he said, and every American in uniform must be instructed about his conduct and proper courses of action when "faced with captivity and as a prisoner."

Individuals and units, he said, must be trained in what to do when they are isolated, surrounded or cut off, and how to "resist and avoid enemy interrogation and indoctrination."
