ILSE KREBOK RIGHT, AND MRS. ANDREW COLLIER

Polish Refugee, Sponsored By KF Woman, Now In Basin

By RUTH KING

Ilse Krebok, born in Poland, who has seen Communism scourge the land of her birth, has reached American soil. The goal she set long before she slipped across a forbidden border to freedom between twilight and dawn.

Ilse, sponsored by Mrs. Andrew Collier of Klamath Falls, is one of the 240,000 citizens of countries of Europe who will enter the United States under the Refuge Relief Act passed recently by Congress. She came into this country with the assistance of the World Church Service organization which advances funds for passage.

She speaks English fluently as well as German. It was her linguistic ability that brought her to the attention of Caroline Collier who went to Europe to assist with welfare work among displaced persons following World War II. Ilse became her secretary and interpreter, and the American girl's glowing accounts of America were the incentive that fired the young Polish girl's interest in becoming a citizen of this country.

As Communism swallowed up industry in her homeland, employes of factories and small businesses were given the choice of embracing the doctrine and working, or of being among the millions of unemployed who turned their backs upon its teachings.

Ilse Krebok chose to leave Poland at the end of World War II and went to Czechoslovakia, moving later into the Eastern Zone of Germany where she felt the pressure of Russian dictatorship.

She was barely 20 in 1949 when she decided to slip through border guards and join a brother in Austria. Her parents remained behind the Iron Curtain.

Her six years of English study assisted her in her employment with an import - export firm that later came under Russian influence, gave her an opportunity to help doctors and nurses on board the boat to New York and again when translations were necessary at the Public Health office. When visas and important papers were checked upon landing.

The 1,240 Europeans aboard who were seeking sanctuary in this country were mostly families. Ages ranged from very young children to elderly persons who were being sponsored by relatives. Destinations of the new arrivals were widely scattered over this country with the majority going to New York, Chicago and California.

Those who are sponsored return the cost of travel as soon as employment is found, to keep the fund rotating for others who will follow.

Ilse hopes to attend night school here and improve her work as a secretary.

Her visa is a permanent one and she will become a citizen in five years "if I study hard," she says.

Families of those who enter under the Refuge Act, their backgrounds and lives are closely checked. None are permitted to enter who do not meet the rigid qualifications for self sustenance and loyalty to the country they hope to remain in.

Ilse and her fellow travelers entered New York Harbor in the early morning, in late July when the sun bathed the Statue of Liberty in a rosy glow. There was no fog and the full impact of the shoreline, the great city and the promise of freedom stilled the lips of the passengers who lined the rails of the converted troop transport. The boat slipped into its moorings. Many women and men were greeted by loved ones, but Ilse Krebok boarded a train alone for the long trip to Oregon and greetings from the Collier family.

Rainmaking Study Planned At Yreka

YREKA — The Siskiyou County board of supervisors is discussing the possibilities of a weather modification project to increase rain and snowfall in the county.

Park R. Shelley of Yreka, who has been actively supporting such a project in the county, named three districts in the state of Washington that are benefiting from a weather modification program.

He said one such district, the Horse Heaven Water Development Association has had such a plan for the past five years, and has raised its rainfall from six to 14 inches per year. He added that wheat crops have materially improved.

Other Washington organizations using the weather modification system are the Big Bend Water Development Association in central Washington and the Blue Mountain Research Association.

Weather is modified, Shelley stated, by evaporating silver iodide from electric heating units. The vapor causes precipitation, he said.

Planes are sometimes used, he said, but this is discouraged because of the quick reaction of silver iodide, which sometimes ices up the aircraft.

Shelley said that the modification should be carried out from October to May to build up the snowpack. He said that cost of the project for Shasta Valley would be approximately $23,000 a year, or 15 cents an acre for alfalfa and 10 cents an acre for other crops.

He suggested that a public meeting be held to hear a weather modification expert, and recommended that representatives of the county inspect the Washington sites.

YMCA School To Be Held

Paul Campbell, executive secretary, and Bill Cornell, program director of the Klamath County YMCA, will attend the annual YMCA summer school which opens Monday for a one-week session at Seabeck, Washington.

Members of the Seabeck faculty this year will include Al Hummel of Omaha, Nebraska; Richard Hamlin, National Council research staff member from New York; Dr. John Magee, professor of philosophy and religion at the College of Puget Sound in Tacoma, Washington, and Arthur Hollister of Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Bob Johnson will be in charge of the local "Y" during the absence of Campbell and Cornell.

Lakeview OSC Meeting Slated

LAKEVIEW — James Howard, Lake County Oregon State College alumni representative, invites all students planning to attend OSC this fall, their parents and OSC alumni to attend an orientation meeting Thursday, August 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Lakeview High School cafeteria.

Oregon State College representatives who will discuss questions such as housing, fees, studies, activities, sports are Fred Shideler, director of information for the college, and Bill Langan, agricultural personnel adviser.

Nineteen of these orientation meetings have been held over the state this month. Lane Thornton is assisting Howard with the Lake County meeting.

PORTLAND'S 26TH FATALITY

PORTLAND (AP) — Moses Black, 83, became Portland's 26th traffic victim of the year when he died Friday night of injuries suffered when struck by an automobile.

The accident occurred at an intersection in the southwest section of the city.

YMCA Leaders Planning Trip

Jerry Sawyer and Jeff Wood of the Klamath County YMCA will leave Sunday with Paul Campbell, "Y" executive secretary, to attend the Pacific Northwest area YMCA Junior Leader Institute which starts Monday at Seabeck, Washington.

Sawyer and Wood are enrolled in the junior leaders training program at the local "Y". The purpose of the one-week leadership institute is to acquaint boys with the responsibilities of volunteer service.

The institute is open to 30 boys, ages 13 to 16, who represent associations of the Northwest. They will take courses in leadership skills, first aid, life saving, teaching techniques, swimming, gymnastics and character education.

The two Klamath Falls representatives qualified to attend because of their record of service for the "Y" this year.

Yreka Board Sets Budget

YREKA — Final approval to next year's budget was given last week by the Siskiyou Couty Board of Supervisors. The budget is set at $8,709,417 and the general tax rate at $2.33½ per $100 assessed valuation.

A special road tax of 21½ cents was added to the rate for property not located within the limits of any city. The supervisors had originally intended to include this as part of the general rate, but found such a course would be illegal.

Last year's tax rate was $2.12 and the budget was $8,549,160. County Auditor Ernest Jonnson said that the general rate is higher partly because of an eight-cent junior college tax to cover money paid to other counties which operate junior colleges attended by Siskiyou County students.

Supervisors passed the tax rate by a three to one vote, with Clint Jackson of Edgewood casting the lone dissenting vote. Chairman Joe G. Allen of Dorris did not vote.

Jackson did not say why he voted against the tax, but indicated on previous occasions that he felt the road tax was too high.

The total budget includes school budgets and special district budgets as well as the general county budget. These districts have the right to levy taxes and a resident of Siskiyou County may obtain his total tax rate by adding the general tax to any school and district taxes he pays.

"DENNIS THE MENACE"

"LOOK! I GOT IT ALL IN ONE BITE!"

THE CAMERA CORNER

By Bud Buesing

So you're going to get a movie camera . . . to keep a life-like record of the baby's growth, to take along on vacations, or just to film your family and friends. Whatever your reason, this is a decision you'll never regret. Few mediums offer as much lasting pleasure as a collection of good motion picture films.

But before you make the purchase, heed this advice . . . don't buy just any movie outfit. Make sure the camera and projector you buy will fulfill your needs. First, you have to decide between an 8mm and a 16mm outfit. Be sure of your choice. Changing from one size to another means both camera and projector would have to be replaced, and films made in one sized outfit wouldn't work in a different size projector.

Two factors come into this choice—first, initial costs and operating costs; second, the type of pictures you want to make and where you want to show them. The difference in cost between an 8mm and a 16mm of similar quality will be very little. The real difference lies in operating costs—specifically, the cost of film. The 8mm picture frame is only half as high as the 16mm frame, so only half as much 8mm footage is required for the same amount of film time. That cuts costs in half for 8mm film. In fact, you can shoot 8mm color for about the cost of 16mm black-and-white film.

Next week we'll compare the picture making abilities of the two cameras. Why don't you stop in this week and look them over?
