THE HORSE ISN'T OUT ALTOGETHER when the haying season rolls around as these pictures taken in Modoc County prove. The man in picture one is Pete Thomsen, mowing with horses on the JD ranch owned by the Weber Brothers and located about six miles south of Alturas. All of these pictures were taken at the same ranch. Picture two shows Tex McCraery following up with a horse drawn rake. Horses have shown up well in the raking operation, not being as fast as tractors but more maneuverable. Picture three shows Lloyd Laver at the wheel of a Jeep pulling a 25-foot scatter rake. Picture four shows Roland Roydon driving a "jitterbug," a converted car with a buck rake on the front. These rigs can attain a speed of sometimes 25 to 30 mph in the field and really speed up the operation. The last picture shows the stacking operation on the JD, done with a hydraulic lift on a tractor. John Weber is at the controls and Ed Rollins (left) and Guy DeForrest on the stack. — Photo by Goulden

Firemen, Save My 'Guess What'

The worm turned literally, thanks to the city firemen Friday afternoon. Two trucks rushed to 444 South Riverside in the afternoon to find a fire at the worm farm of Roy Nichols. A protective canvas over the worms had been set ablaze by a spark from a fire in a nearby barrel. The firemen saved the worms and chalked up a new experience in fire fighting. Earlier in the afternoon another canvas fire had threatened Riverside School in the same area. A painter had dropped a cigarette on a tarpaulin over a coal bin. It was squelched before the flames had a chance to spread. A third fire the same afternoon involved a tray of cedar shavings at the Troy V. Cook Company, 2040 South Sixth Street. The shavings were next to the building, but the firemen doused the flames in time to prevent further damage. A lighted cigarette was thought to be the cause in this case. TON. Damage was estimated at $100.

PT & T Asks New Plant

YREKA — The Yreka city planning commission has decided to hold a public hearing on a proposal of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company to build a switching plant in a residential area in Yreka. The hearing will be held September 21 at the Yreka city hall. The company proposes to construct a building on North Oregon Street between Yarna and Lennox streets, north of the business section. The building would be a single story unit facing Oregon Street. Estimated cost is $100,000. Before it could be built, a home would have to be either torn down or moved to another site. Dr. A. H. Newton appeared at a preliminary meeting on the subject Wednesday to protest. Newton, owner of the adjacent lot, said that the area would be zoned as residential property. W. W. Kennerston of the PT&T engineering department told the commission that the building would be used as a central office for switchboards and toll boards. There would be no business office, storage yard or other facilities at the location, and no heavy trucks would ever park there after it is built, he said. He said that the growth of the city appears to be northwest, and that the proposed location was selected to obtain minimum costs of relocation of cables and other facilities, which in turn would result in a saving to the public. He said that cost of a location in a fringe area would be prohibitive.
