Terror Campaign Ravages Morocco; French Flee City

OUED ZEM, French Morocco (AP)—Here in the foothills of Morocco's Atlas Mountains, the French may have had their first taste of a terror campaign combining some of the worst features of East Africa's Mau Maus with the guerrilla warfare plaguing neighboring Algeria.

Just two hours' drive from Casablanca, Oued Zem is a pleasant little mining town whose painted one-story houses contrast gaily with the hot, stony countryside around it.

Today most of its 11,000 Moroccan inhabitants have fled to the countryside in fear of French reprisals.

Many of the surviving 700 Europeans are crowded into the French government headquarters. Women nurse their babies and weep for lost relatives while their men, armed with rifles and cartridge belts, help the Foreign Legion guard the town.

This is what happened: Saturday was billed in advance as a day of violence, but in peaceful Oued Zem, Mohammed Ben Youssef, was expected to riot in the big commercial center. But the Smaala tribe near Oued Zem had backed France's ouster of Ben Youssef two years ago.

Only a small police force guarded the little mining center.

About 9 a.m. 4,000 robed tribesmen, half of them on horseback, descended on the town.

Joined by about 2,000 townsmen they cut down telegraph poles, set up barricades, stoned passers-by and set fire to gasoline stations.

Then they broke into European homes, in an orgy of blood letting. Officials say they killed 50 Europeans. Some still missing may have escaped.

A French official said most of the victims were children, their throats cut as the tribesmen would slaughter lambs.

As many Europeans as could reached the government headquarters. The men clamored for arms, but authorities did not distribute them until midafternoon in fear of reprisals against the native population.

For six or seven hours the rioters controlled most of the town. In the afternoon they attacked the government building, but the armed civilians beat them off.

Foreign Legionnaires, many of them German volunteers, arrived about 5 p.m. and quickly cleared the town. Heavily armed scout cars pursued the tribesmen 10 or 12 miles back toward the mountains.

A man who went with the legion said at least 100 of the Moroccans must have been killed. The retreating tribesmen took many of their casualties with them.

Much of the town was ruined. In some districts nearly every house was burned out. Officials hurriedly estimated the damage at a billion francs, about $300,000.

"This land has drunk up tens of millions of my francs," said one rifle-bearing civilian. "Now it has drunk up my son too."

French Morocco has dozens of small towns like Oued Zem, where the Moroccans far outnumber the French. France does not have enough police and troops to garrison them all.

Refugee Act Backing Asked

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Watkins (R-Utah) called today for congressional consideration of possible extension, as well as revision, of the European Refugee Admission Act.

Watkins, a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said he believes the original goal of admitting 214,000 refugees may almost be reached by the time the act expires at the end of next year.

"We will have to consider in the next session whether to extend this act as well as whether it should be revised as President Eisenhower suggested," he said. "Unless it is extended, it won't do much good to amend it."

Eisenhower proposed several changes in the law to relax restrictions that Sen. Lehman (D-NY) and others have contended have held the influx of refugees to a mere trickle.

The Judiciary Committee considered these proposals, along with others, but took no action before adjournment.

Watkins said he thinks there are some "weak spots" in the act which have made its terms difficult to carry out. Nevertheless, he said the program now is going "in high gear" with about 1,400 persons being admitted weekly.

"I am confident that all of the Greeks and Italians contemplated under the act will be admitted," he said.

"Not all of the escapees and expellees from Germany are likely to get here and there is trouble about the admission of people from the Low Countries."

Up to now he said only about 50,000 refugees have been received in this country.

U.S., Europe Allies Plan Test Of Soviet Proposals

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States and its major European allies are working on a series of proposals to test Soviet peace intentions and expose any phony Russian propaganda.

The proposals will be put into operation in a series of important international conferences during the next several months.

These include the United Nations subcommittee on disarmament meeting in New York Aug. 20.

West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's scheduled visit to Moscow Sept. 9; and the four-power foreign ministers' meeting to open in Geneva Oct. 27.

When these sessions are concluded, American officials hope to have a much better idea of the true aims of Russia's leaders and the extent of change in Moscow's attitude toward the outside world.

The proposals are being developed by Britain, France and West Germany as well as this country.

Late Bather Causes Furor

HAMPTON, Va. (AP)—It was hot and humid in Hampton night before last. So hot and humid that a Hampton man, who'd been fishing in Mills Creek beside a bridge on the Military Highway, decided to peel off his clothes and take a swim.

After all, it was 2 a.m. and much too late for a car to come along ... but one did.

The man, who had just finished disrobing, scrambled over an abutment and hid.

The motorist caught a glimpse of him as he rolled over the side of the abutment and, fearing an accident had happened, stopped to investigate.

When the motorist didn't see anybody in the water, he called police. The police called the fire department. Rescuers hurried to the scene. A large crowd gathered. Helicopters from a nearby Army base were summoned.

Officers found the missing man's clothing piled beside his bicycle by the creek. Papers in his pockets gave them his name. They sadly notified his family of his disappearance.

For nearly two hours the search proceeded.

At 3:45 a.m. a telephone jangled at police headquarters. It was the man's wife. He'd arrived home safely—but unharmed.

Police declined to give the man's name.

Oldster Held On Murder Charge

SUNLAND, Calif. (AP)—A 91-year-old man was in jail today on suspicion of murder after his 85-year-old sanitation roommate was found beaten to death.

Nurse Ethel Allen found the body of Gustaf Emil Elm yesterday. Police said Elm's head had been battered, apparently with a small kitchen stool.

Police arrested A. K. Baldwin, who said Elm had been bothering his wife. But police said Baldwin's wife died several years ago, before he knew Elm.

Church Women Plan Dinner

Women of the Immanuel Baptist Church will hold a dinner in the church basement Tuesday night at 8:30.

The program planned by Mrs. John Classen will include: Two sound-color films—one on Alaska and one on the Holy Land; a coronet-accordion duet by Mrs. Mary Adams and Mrs. Classen; vocal selections of a trio composed of Mrs. Leo Zell, Mrs. Don Redfield and Mrs. Charles Meyers; recitation of a poem, entitled "Let's," by Mrs. W. L. Ross; and closing devotions by Mrs. Lucille Birns.

Ladies wishing to attend must telephone Mrs. D. Irvin, 2-0880.

TYPHOON

TOKYO (AP)—Typhoon Iris, the 11th tropical storm of the year in the Pacific, was spotted bearing down on Formosa today, 286 miles away.

So far the Soviet change has been displayed mainly in smiles and gestures such as a recent party which Premier Bulganin gave for diplomats at his country estate near Moscow and the decision Saturday to let three Americans long imprisoned in Russia return home.

The biggest concession was the signing of the Austrian independence treaty last May.

The Russians have promised to withdraw their troops from Austria soon but this will not materially alter their European military deployment. They still will have forces in East Germany and Hungary and Romania.

United States officials thus see the Soviets as talking a great deal about peace and better East-West relations but actually doing very little to eliminate real Western fears of some future Russian aggression.

At the U.N. Disarmament subcommittee meeting the United States will press Russia to accept the aerial inspection program.

President Eisenhower's proposal for exchange of military blueprints and aerial inspection as a basis to develop a worldwide disarmament program.

There were weekend indications the aerial inspection program could be expanded to include U.S. military bases overseas if the Soviets are willing to trade information of equal value to this country.

Eisenhower's advisers are hopeful but not optimistic. They believe that if Russia turns down aerial inspection and insists on restricted ground inspection as in the past, it will mean that Moscow's present leaders are no more prepared than was Stalin to join in effecting a system of international arms reduction control.

Adenauer's talks in Moscow will take up German reunification, the return of German war prisoners still held in Russia, and trade and diplomatic relations. The Russian position on these topics will be of unusual significance in judging Russia's policies.

The foreign ministers of the United States, Britain, France and Russia will meet at Geneva for a broad range of negotiations on disarmament, German unification, European security and measures to remove the Iron Curtain. American officials are determined to confront the Russians with a series of concrete propositions there.

Civil Liberty Report Given

NEW YORK (AP)—Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, president of the fund for the Republic, says there is "cause for alarm" in the civil liberties situation in the United States.

Hutchins says in the fund's first report.

"Although in some particulars the atmosphere is better than it was five years ago, the misunderstanding of civil liberties, the indifference to them, and the violation of them, to which we too easily grow accustomed, are still such as to give cause for alarm."

The fund, whose report was issued Sunday, was authorized in 1951 by the Ford Foundation, a private philanthropic organization set up by the automobile family.

The fund, which has received grants of 15 million dollars from the Ford Foundation, was incorporated in 1952 and has independent status.

Purpose of the Fund for the Republic is "to advance understanding of civil liberties."

Hutchins said the fund has spent $2,514,736 since it started work in 1952.
