Hard Hit City Fights Damage

WOONSOCKET, R.I. (AP)—Flood-stricken Woonsocket, hardest hit of Rhode Island communities, struggled doggedly toward recovery today with assistance from the federal and state governments.

Mayor Kevin Coleman said Army engineers will remove smashed bridges and strengthen damaged bridges, as well as remove all obstructions left behind by the Blackstone River when it flooded last Friday.

He said also that the Federal Civil Defense Administration will reimburse city employees for all overtime accrued because of the flood and will pay all temporary help hired by the city.

Another favorable report was that about 5,000 of the city's industrial employees, who were forced out of work by the flood, already are back at their tasks. Another 2,500 were expected to return to their jobs next week.

WHICH TWIN IS MORE TONEY?

Even their own mother can't tell them apart... but your TV set knows which is which in tubes and parts. Can't slip in one that's just a "look-alike" and expect to get high-toned performance from your set. That's no problem with us, though. We've got a complete stock of tubes and parts for any TV service job. Let us install a real twin for that ailing part.
