New Kansas Town Rises From Rubble Left By Hurricane

Editor's Note: Flash floods have taken more than 200 lives and left 34,000 families homeless in six Northeastern states. The future is grim for the stricken towns and cities. Here is a report on how a disaster-struck community fights its way back.

UDALL, Kan. (UP)—A new Udall is rising from the rubble left by the terrible tornado three months ago.

Volunteer labor—in the spirit of the early settlers who helped their neighbors when there was trouble—has helped make the rebuilding possible.

The money has come mostly from insurance, the federal government and the Red Cross.

Workmen from Wichita, 20 miles north of Udall, donated their time to pour concrete for a new City Hall.

Contractors charged nothing for the material. This brick building will give Udall space for a fire station, the public library and offices for the mayor and city clerk.

The sight of the new City Hall going up has helped keep up the spirit of Udall residents.

It took only one minute, on the night of May 25, for a twister to reduce this town to debris. Eighty persons were killed, one-sixth of the population. Scores were injured.

E. B. Harvey, the town blacksmith who also ran an automobile agency, lost his wife in the tornado and spent six weeks in a hospital recuperating from the injuries.

Harvey's home and some of his new cars were partly covered by insurance. With the insurance money and a government loan he has started to rebuild.

"What's done is done, and there's nothing I can do about it, so I just go about my business and try to be happy in my work," said Harvey. "There are lots of people worse off than I am."

Most of Udall's citizens will be in debt for several years to the government and to banks and private loan companies. Officials estimate the indebtedness will amount to about two thirds of the total cost of reconstruction.

Many were left with only the clothing on their backs after the tornado. At least half the population had some kind of insurance.

but it covered only a small part of their losses. One father and two children (the mother was killed in the storm) were not eligible for a government loan so the Red Cross replaced their small home. Another family was left homeless when the wind reduced a six-room frame house to kindling. The house, valued at $7000, has been replaced by a new one that cost $11,000. Insurance paid for $4500 and the remainder was covered by a personal loan. The Red Cross provided furniture for the new dwelling.

Home Leave For Prisoners Asked

WINNIPEG, Man. (AP)—The Manitoba government wants to make a daring innovation at its Headingly provincial jail, scene of two riots and other disturbances in the past nine months. It is proposing to give 48-hour home leaves once every three months to good conduct prisoners.

Provincial officials said today permission to try the "vacation" plan has been asked of the federal government in Ottawa. Such permission is required in the case of persons convicted under the criminal code or other federal laws.

The plan was recommended by a three-man commission set up to investigate the institution after a riot there last December. The group said the time off would give the convicts a chance to contact prospective employers, deal with domestic and personal problems and renew home and family ties.
