

Teachers To Gather Here

The in-service program and Klamath-Lake County Institute for teachers of city and county schools will start Monday, August 29, and continue through Friday, September 2.

Plans for the week's activities were released by G. E. Robertson, general supervisor for the city school system.

On Monday, Klamath Falls teachers will meet at Mills school at 8:45 a.m. Workshops on courses of study and curriculum problems, meetings with principals, department meetings and faculty meetings will be included in the first day's activities. County teachers will meet at Peterson school.

Business firms in the city will be visited Tuesday morning on the "Business - Industry Education Day" tour, arranged by R. Frank Tucker, manager of the Klamath County Chamber of Commerce.

The afternoon will be devoted to continuing workshops and other pertinent school studies.

Teachers will register at Mills for the first day of the dual-county institute which will include both city and county teachers. Rex Putnam, state superintendent of public education is expected for the opening session.

The program will include open sessions, sectional meetings, discussions, symposiums, and social hours.

Several hundred teachers are expected to attend.

E. R. Cardwell Funeral Held

Funeral services were held at 2 p.m. Tuesday from Ward's Klamath Funeral Home for Edward Richard Cardwell, 87-year-old pioneer Wood River Valley rancher. He died August 20 at his Stukel Mountain ranch home.

The family had made its home at Stukel Mountain after leaving Fort Klamath about 20 years ago. A native Oregonian, he was born April 1, 1868, in Sams Valley, Jackson County.

The Rev. Father T. P. Casey of Klamath Falls Sacred Heart Church officiated. Dean Stephens was soloist, accompanied at the organ by Ruby Hatt. Concluding services and interment were in Klamath Memorial Park.

Active pallbearers were Emmett Sismore, Guss A. Page, William Brewer, all of Fort Klamath, and Johnny Weston, Ison Patterson and Warren Woodard. Honorary pallbearers were B. Seth Dixon, J. P. McLaughlin, Fort Klamath; Gene Hammond, C. E. Drew Sr., Charles Whitmore and John Caldwell.

Survivors include the widow, Mrs. Rose Griffith Cardwell, a daughter and granddaughter, Mrs. Fay Waters and Rose Hannah Waters, Klamath Falls.

Weed PTA Plans Rummage Sale

WEED — Rummage sale items are being received by all local district chairmen of the annual Weed PTA rummage sale which will be held in the Weed Court Club October 4 and 5.

As in the past, all soiled garments will be cleaned without charge before the sale. Anyone having good clothing for donation, clean or in need of cleaning, is asked to notify a chairman or deliver it to one of the chairmen as soon as possible.

All items of household equipment, clothing, toys, dishes, tools, etc., are acceptable.

Mrs. A. K. Martin is general chairman.

Hunsaker Speaks To KF Lions

Rex Hunsaker, OTI athletic director, was guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Klamath Falls Lions Club Tuesday, August 23, at the Willard Hotel.

Hunsaker gave an informative talk on the vocational opportunities offered at OTI to athletes as well as regular students. He stated that OTI anticipates the largest enrollment this year in the history of the college and he expects to field the school's finest football squad to date.

He introduced his assistant coaches Jim McGowan, end coach; Dr. George Miller, line coach; and Corby Van Lue, backfield coach. All gave encouraging talks about the squad material at the school and about the opportunities offered to students at OTI.

Brick Leach, Lions Club president, has outlined plans for the club to assist in selling tickets and presenting half-time activities for the first Oregon Tech football game in Klamath Falls, September 24.

The club will also work to boost attendance at OTI athletic games. Leo Morstad, was program chairman.

Gus Lampropulos, After 28 Years, Moves Grocery Store

A boyhood dream in far-off Greece was realized 28 years later in Klamath Falls by Gus Lampropulos, who now is making his biggest move since he left his native land.

"Ever since I was a little boy in the old country I dreamed of having my own grocery store," related Gus.

He got his wish in 1927 when he bought a small building on the corner of Twelfth and Main streets. This was the start of the Olympia Grocery, which is named after his birthplace in Greece.

But Gus is moving now. He is taking his canned goods and vegetables to a new location on Martin and Holly streets. A super service station is to be erected where Gus ran up his cash register for so many years.

Gus will still be in familiar surroundings, however, because he is not only moving his groceries, but also the building.

In fact, Gus is quite happy about moving.

"Now I have my own property, my own building, and lots of parking space," he said.

A few months ago, however, it had looked as if maybe Gus had properly but no place to move. After he had acquired the lot he learned that it was located in a Class II residential zone, which means grocery stores are taboo.

Gus took his problem to the city council one night in hopes of changing the status of the property in question to that of a business zone. The slow gears of legal machinery were set in motion, and today it looks as if the re-zoning will soon be effected.

One-third of the Lampropulos store is already on the new property. The long building is being cut into three sections and moved by truck. Gus intends to do some remodeling when the moving is completed and probably reopen by October.

In the meantime the Lampropulos home is stacked high with merchandise. Gus originally had intended to use part of his house at 207 East Main for the grocery business, but figured that not enough parking was available.

The Lampropulos dream of dealing with groceries was not realized for quite some time after he came to the United States from Greece in 1911. He was 18 years old at the time.

He spent 16 years in the mills before he became a grocer.

His first store was in the present "Super Grocer" building (now moved) on Main Street. A fire in 1930 burned part of his establishment and prompted him to move to an adjacent building, which was once a theater. It is the same building that he is now moving to the new lot.

Gus particularly likes his business because of the opportunity he has to meet so many people.

"I have met lots of tourists who were coming through town," he said. "and have met people from all over the United States."

The only real excitement at the store which Gus could recall was when he was held up in 1929.

"They told me to stick up my hands," he said, "and then they took all the money from a small cash register on the soda fountain. I had about $100 in my pocket which I had taken from another cash register. I threw it behind a stack of crackers."

So the thieves only escaped with $25.

The Lampropulos grocery business has been a family affair for quite some time now. There are four children in the family and all have helped out at one time or another.

Chris, 25, is now married, but the three girls, Cleo, 27; Athena, 22, and Dena, 19, still work in the store now and then.

A bright future in music is foreseen for Athena, who has attended the University of Washington the past four years. Her goal is to become an opera singer, and she is also an accomplished violinist. Dena is a pianist and singer as well and will be in her second year at Willamette University.

Public Road Bid Submitted

YREKA — A second petition has been filed with the Siskiyou County Board of Supervisors to have the John Ladd Chrome Mine road near Selad taken into the county road system by eminent domain.

Mrs. Dorothea Moroney, owner of the chrome mine, who had filed a previous petition in June, appeared before the board Tuesday with a new petition signed by 12 persons.

The board referred the petition to the planning commission which meets September 7.

Mrs. Moroney asked that the road be taken into the county system after she was denied permission to use a portion of it on land owned by Mr. and Mrs. George Burkhard of Berkeley who have a summer residence there. The road connects the mine with the Klamath River highway near Selad.

The board had started condemnation proceedings on the first petition but dismissed the action before it got to court when it appeared that the Burkhard and Mrs. Moroney might be able to agree on its use. They failed to come to terms, however, and Mrs. Moroney has renewed her efforts to have the road condemned.

Her petition states that the road is the only route to a large deposit of chrome ore, to a forest recreation area, to timber land and to a large grazing area. She stated she has lost one year's production because the Burkhard's refused to allow her trucks access to the mine.

The road was built by the U.S. government during World War II as a chrome access road. However, at the end of the war, the road reverted back to the owners of the property it crosses. Mr. and Mrs. Burkhard are only one of several owners of the road who object to Mrs. Moroney's use of it.
