

West Awaits Red View On Disarming

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UP)—The West ends four days of disarmament talks with Russia today with little hope of getting Soviet views on President Eisenhower's military inspection plan before next week.

The five-nation United Nations disarmament subcommittee, after a brief meeting was scheduled to adjourn for the Labor Day weekend and meet again next Tuesday.

Western experts believe Soviet delegate Arkady A. Sobolev would have to confer with Moscow before making any firm reply to the Eisenhower plan, which includes exchange of military blueprints, aerial inspection and Soviet-backed ground inspection teams.

American disarmament expert Harold E. Stassen said he did not expect any firm reply to the Eisenhower plan to be discussed in substance until next week.

Informants said the secret sessions, also including Britain, France and Canada, were conducted in friendly fashion.

Stassen said he believed progress was being made. "All governments are agreed that ground inspection is possible," he said. Such agreement "is an important fact at this early stage."

But he pointed out there was no agreement as to the extent of on-the-spot inspection to be allowed, the number of inspectors to be used, the scope of the inspection or the power of the inspectors.

The delegates met for two hours Wednesday. It was understood that Stassen made it clear to Sobolev that American acceptance of the Soviet proposal for ground inspection did not mean the U.S. would give up President Eisenhower's plans for aerial inspection of each other's territory and exchange of detailed military information.

France's Jules Moch asked pointedly why the plan was limited to the United States and Russia. He argued that France, at a strategic continental power, deserved a major role in any disarmament program from the outset.

Fire Destroys Line Truck

PORT ROCK — A fire of undetermined origin totally destroyed a truck and three cross-tied power poles and burned over approximately 90 acres of sagebrush land near the old town site of Fremont Monday afternoon, according to Avon Derrick, local fire warden.

The truck motor suddenly burst into flame according to Bob McGuire of Lapine. McGuire said that he was unable to put out the fire with the extinguisher carried on the truck. McGuire and Jack Powell, also of Lapine, were distributing poles for the high voltage line being built into the area by Carlson Construction Company for Midstate Electric. The truck was a two-ton Federal equipped with a boom hoist used principally for lifting and setting poles.

Floyd Branch of Fort Rock, road maintainer, plowed fire breaks with the county road grader and was later assisted by Dan Beuener, Cabin Lake fire guard, using Forest Service equipment. The Bureau of Land Management range land is used by R. A. Long.

Peron Emerges From Crisis Stronger; Backs Violence

BUENOS AIRES (UP)—President Juan D. Peron emerged stronger than ever today from ten drama-packed hours of crisis which began when he offered to resign and ended when he withdrew the offer with a pledge of violence against his political enemies.

Peron, in one of the most violent speeches of his career, made it clear the political truce was at an end. He gave permission to Peronistas to kill anyone rising against the government and he promised to "reply to violent action with more violent action."

A general strike called by the six-million member General Confederation of Labor (CGT) to protest his resignation was called off today and Argentina began returning to normal. Strong police reinforcements guarded key points but no trouble was reported.

The only casualties were seven persons killed and 31 injured, victims of a freak train accident at the village of Tucuman.

The victims, railroad workers en route to Buenos Aires to attend the mass rally for Peron at the Plaza de Mayo, were sitting on the roof of an overcrowded train. The high tension wires of a trolley line decapitated some of the victims when the train passed underneath it and flung others against big advertising posters lining the track.

Had Peron insisted on resigning, Argentina would have been without a government, a congress or courts. Members of the supreme court, the vice president, Peronista senators and deputies en masse threatened to quit if he did. The CGT said it would continue the general strike indefinitely.

The signal that the immediate crises had passed was given by the great siren of the newspaper La Prensa after Peron stood on a balcony overlooking the plaza flanked by the heads of the three armed forces and promised the Peronistas to exact five-fold vengeance for all followers who fell in the hands of his political enemies.

One of the most violent statements of the violent speech came when he granted permission for Peronistas to kill anyone rising against the constitution, law and the legal government.

"We have offered them peace," he said. "They did not want it. Now we offer them a battle, and they know that when we decide to fight we fight to the end. We are going to fight everywhere, every place. Five of them will fall for every one of us."

Peron made no direct reference to his feud with the Catholic Church, but he said his opponents were using "various pretexts—liberty, justice, religion, any other thing they can use as a shield" to try to turn the clock back to 1943 (when Peron began his rise to power.)
