New 1956 Ford Shown Press

DETROIT (AP) — The 1956 Ford passenger cars were shown at an off-the-record press preview Tuesday.

In a production and retail sales battle with Chevrolet, Ford made a lightning-quick switchover from 1955 to 1956 models. The cars will be shown publicly next week, at which time prices also will be announced.

While styling and engineering details are being withheld pending the public showing, the speed with which the changeover was made indicates few major styling alterations. It also is quite generally known Ford has installed a 198 horsepower engine in the 1956 line of V-8s.

Ford already has announced its 1956 line will have all the safety features already disclosed for the new Lincoln series. These include the center steering wheel, safety door latches and shatter-resistant rear view mirror as standard equipment, and lap belts and crash padding on instrument panel and visors as optional items.
