Prayers, Letters Helped Loretta Young Recover

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Hollywood Writer
HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Loretta Young, home after a serious illness and two operations that kept her in a hospital bed nearly five months, told today how she escaped death: "Prayers and letters did it."
The big-eyed, graceful star of television's "The Loretta Young Show" looks better than ever following a two-month rest at her summer home at Ojai, although doctors haven't decided when she can return to her strenuous program.
Seven months ago she lay in pain from a serious infection, peritonitis, in a hospital at nearby Oxnard. She was allowed no visitors. She was calms, not even flowers in her room. She could not read because her vision was blurred from heavy sedatives. Her only touch with the outside world came when nurses read her stacks of get-well letters from her fans.
"I got so I would ask, 'Any mail?'" smiled the actress as she told for the first time of her brush with death. "All the letters were so completely unselfish—hurry up and get well and come back to TV."
"So many promised to pray for me. I know it's the prayers that did it. I remember one letter from a woman who had been operated on for cancer. I had been feeling rather low that day, and I then felt like a jerk for complaining."
Loretta entered the hospital the day after Easter, and "If I had known how long I would be there I would have died of despair."
"I later knew how serious it was," she said. "I remember one bad night I said to the nurse, 'Is this dying?' She said, 'No, it's just a spasm.' It went on three hours. I went into shock."
"There were times I was in such pain I was afraid I wouldn't die. One day I said to the chaplain, 'Will you say a prayer that whatever I am supposed to learn by this pain, I'll learn?' Finally I realized what it was—patience and fortitude. Sometimes the Lord has to throw you down, to give you time to look up."
"As difficult as the pain was, it was the best thing that happened to me. All my life I've been afraid of pain. Now I'm less afraid. And coming through this gives you a deeper sense of appreciation of life."
Loretta is queen of the romantic, "Woman's Appeal" program, and the story of her ordeal sounds almost like a plot of her show. There was even a light touch—an 85-year-old sick nun in the next room who "wanted to die for the last 10 years but the Lord wouldn't take her. She was so pleased when she fell bad."

"I eat six meals a day now," she said with a laugh.

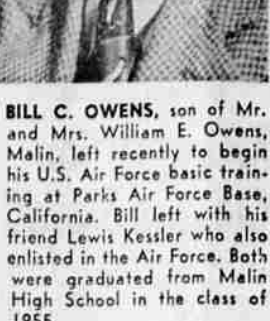

"And I have another rule—I never will discuss my operation."

Family Rivals Live In Bliss

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

Two careers in one family work out all right, just so one does not try to influence the other, says Simonetta, Italian designer, whose husband Fabiani is head of the Roman fashion house which is one of her chief competitors.
In New York during a tour of the country to introduce a new perfume along with her fall fashion collection, Simonetta laughed gaily as she discussed the phenomenon of living in marital bliss with a rival genius. Said she:
"Both of us were well launched in our own careers at the time of our marriage, so we just carried on. There never was any question of joining our two businesses. My husband is known for his own particular style of design, just as I am known for mine. We discuss generally our plans for each new collection, and then we leave each other alone."
"Often, as this year, our collections are entirely different. This fall Fabiani likes belts very low while I like them very high. No friction, you see."
Simonetta says she thinks actually it's a good idea to be married to a man in the same business, explaining:
"Fashion design is a hectic business you know. When I am working on a collection I may keep at it for days at a time with practically no sleep, working until midnight every night. If my husband were, say, a banker, he would not understand such things. But as it is, my husband is keeping the same hours and doing the same thing, so there is no argument."
