Lonardi Takes Oath of Office

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Maj. Gen. Eduardo Lonardi, victorious chief of the rebellion which overthrew Juan D. Peron, took the oath of officer as Argentina's provisional president.

He was sworn in at 2 p.m. in the white salon of Government House—where Peron reigned for a decade—only a short time after making a triumphal entry into the capital.

Oldtimers said the welcome surpassed anything ever arranged by Peron's enthusiastic labor supporters.

Standing alongside the new leader as he took the oath was Santiago Luis Cardinal Copello, Roman Catholic primate of Argentina. When the ceremony ended the new president and the cardinal embraced. One of the reasons behind Peron's downfall was his lengthy feud with the church.

The airfield in suburban Palermo where Lonardi landed was tightly guarded by troops and police armed with machineguns. A red carpet was rolled out for him. Thousands of citizens crowded around the airport limits, cheering wildly and waving flags.

The planes which accompanied Lonardi from the rebel center of Cordoba were freshly painted with a huge V for victory and with the cross.

Before leaving Cordoba, Lonardi spoke of the possibility Peron might be brought to trial.

"We want to make it impossible for him to again damage the country," Lonardi told a news conference. "In case he is brought to trial, the ex-president will present himself as any other Argentine and enjoy all the guarantees and rights established in the constitution."

Defense, Prosecution Heard In Mississippi Death Case

SUMNER, Miss. (AP) — Defense Attorney J. W. Kellum told a country jury Friday "Your forefathers will turn over in their graves" if the jurors convict two white men of murdering a 14-year-old Chicago Negro boy.

But. Dist. Atty. Gerald Chatham shouted "the killing of Emmett Till . . . was a cowardly act" and pleaded for conviction.

Roy Bryant, 24, and his half-brother, John W. Milam, 36, are charged with murdering Emmett Louis Till in a widely publicized wolf-whistle slaying.

The case appeared likely to reach a jury composed principally of Mississippi delta farmers during the afternoon.

Circuit Judge Curtis Swango Jr. recessed the trial for lunch halfway through closing arguments by the defense.

Kellum—one of five local attorneys defending Bryant and Milam—told the all-white, all-male jury it would be admitting freedom was lost forever, if it convicted the two defendants.

Defense attorney Sidney Carlton demanded: "Where is the motive?"

Testimony by Bryant's wife about a Negro man who molested and whistled at her did not implicate Till, Carlton said.

Sweating profusely, Chatham loudly said: "The first words that entered this case were literally dripping with the blood of Emmett Till."

He charged Bryant and Milam, gave the Chicago boy "a court-martial with the death penalty imposed."

The first words in the kidnap-slaying, said Chatham, were, "I want the boy from Chicago who did the talking at Money."

Mose Wright, the slain boy's sharecropper uncle, testified Milam used those words when he roused the 64-year-old man from bed early Aug. 28 and took Till from the cottonfield shack.

In a deep rolling voice, Chatham told the jury:

"I was born and bred in the South. I'll live and die in the South. The very worst punishment that could have occurred or should have occurred if they had any ides in their minds that this boy had done anything was to take a razor strap, turn him over a barrel and give him a little beating.

"I've whipped my boy. You've whipped yours. A man deals with a child accordingly as a child not as man to man."

The jury listened intently.

A few feet behind the district attorney, Bryant sat with his right arm resting on the railing and around his wife. He had a cigar in the left side of his mouth.

Milam, during part of the summation, leaned forward and studied a newspaper resting in his lap.

The defense finished its case in mid-morning after presenting six character witnesses. The defendants did not testify.

Judge Swango again overruled defense motions for a directed verdict of innocent.

In Mississippi, the state opens and closes the final arguments. The defense argument is sandwiched between the state's arguments.

Typhoon Hits Philippines

MANILA (AP) — The season's worst typhoon cut a path of destruction through six northern Philippine provinces Friday with 120-mile-per-hour winds.

There were no immediate reports of casualties.

The storm swept through thousands of homes, toppled telephone communication poles, uprooted trees and destroyed vast croplands.

Downtown Manila, some 200 miles south of the storm center, was without lights or power for several hours. Traffic snarled in inundated streets in the year's worst jam.

The typhoon was centered 40 miles east of Vigan port in Ilocos Sur Province at 2 p.m. and was moving west-northwest at 12 miles per hour.

The Manila Weather Bureau said the storm was expected to grow stronger Friday night after swirling through the sparsely populated West Luzon mountains into the China Sea.
