By Bessy, the Basin Bossy

Winter time and winter sports lie just ahead of us—hear those reports of snow, snow. Already at Crater Lake and over the passes.

If you've ever enjoyed the crisp, luscious exercise of skiing or sledding or tobogganing—or just plain snow-playing—you've naturally felt that wonderful, relaxing feeling that comes with warming up once more... perhaps before a fire.

Well, now they've come up with an ensemble designed strictly for "after-skiing."

It's a one-piece black-suit of lake fur designed by Resi Hammer of Austria. It is topped by a fuzzy red loden three-quarter coat. The black and white trousers stop just above the ankles, and the top is scoop-necked.

The festive air has moved into maternity fashions. From down Los Angeles way comes word of designs with that subtle holiday feeling.

Matter of fact, holiday items are getting the last-minute onceovers by local shops, and some may already be well into the wintertime fashion line. It never pays not to keep constantly looking, checking. The wonderful, ever-changing fashion lines are fun and interesting—and mighty important if you're trying to keep seriously up to date.

Of course, you're both up-to-date and getting enjoyment, too, when you keep drinking those important three glasses of milk every day. And your family—each and every member—should be getting the same amount... at least. Take it from me, BESSY
