

ENCORE CAKE is made with stewed California dried figs added to Spice Cake Mix. The recipe comes from the California Fig Institute.

California Dried Figs

8 unweetened stewed California dried figs
1 package Spice Cake Mix
1 cup plus 2 tablespoons juice from stewed figs
2 whole eggs
2 tablespoons water
1 can moist coconut
With scissors snip the stems off the stewed figs. Then place the figs in the mixing bowl and beat hard with the electric or hand beater. The figs will be whirled into small bits. Add the contents from the Spice Cake Mix, plus the juice from the stewed figs. Beat for two minutes. Add the eggs and beat one minute. Then add the two tablespoons water and beat at low speed for one more minute. Place in two well-buttered 9-inch layer pans. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 25 minutes. Cool slightly. Frost with your favorite vanilla frosting with lots of coconut sprinkled on frosting between layers and on top.

BEST WAY TO PREPARE DRIED FIGS

In a saucepan, cover the figs with cold water, cover the pan tightly and cook slowly on low heat for 35 minutes. No sugar until you taste them after cooking, please.

And do try these sun-sweetened figs served cold with cold, fresh dairy soured cream or yogurt, with a good sprinkling of powdered sugar on top. Delicious for a dessert or any time.

Stewed figs cut up in a fine custard, either boiled or baked, are superb.

Stewed figs cut into pieces and stirred together with a little strained honey and nuts make an unusual sandwich filling and also a fine filling for a dessert omelet. (Keep your omelet delicate and thin and fold it over this exotic mixture).

Stewed figs with their stems snipped off are quickly mashed filling for work-a-day sandwiches. They blend well with all the nut family, including peanut butter.

"Alive" Lipstick

How would you like to change the shape of your mouth? Or, if you already like it, how would you like it to look fresh, red and beautiful all the time? Lilly Dache, noted glamour expert, asserts that both "miracles" are now just routine. A new development in the pigmentation of lipstick has made the restyled, true-blood red mouth as easy as writing your name.

Lilly, now the head of the famed cosmetic house of Lucien Lelone, calls her new deep-penetrating lipstick "Alive" because it actually sends color below the surface of the skin—to stay for hours and build up a reserve that requires less and less renewing. Thus, says Lilly Dache, a woman can actually change the contour of her lips, widen the curve or diminish the depth of the lower lip, draw a delicious upswing at corners, and so on to perfection. After a week or two the new outline outlines the old. Wondrous? Yes, but that's what modern beauty science is for, says the insatiable Miss Dache. To her laboratory technicians she is known as "our favorite slave driver."

"Alive" lipstick is made from a revolutionary new formula that makes it everlastingly indelible and at the same time gives the lips an even true color without a "painted on" look. In spite of its lasting qualities the pigment is ultra-creamy and smooth-feeling very much like a fluid as it is applied.

The cream of the lipstick is absorbed into the skin with the lipstick "setting" itself in 20 minutes without blotting. After the lipstick has "set" the lips feel perfectly natural, as though no lipstick were being worn at all; nothing but the color remains. Nonetheless, the ingredients in the lipstick actually fight off cracking and chapping. The "Alive" is so well absorbed into the tissues that such things as stained cups, glasses, red marked cigarettes, and smeared table napkins are virtually eliminated. It stays on even through washing and creaming.

To apply "Alive" most effectively, Miss Dache makes the following suggestions: Thoroughly remove every trace of former lipstick as well as any cream or lotion. Apply lipstick. Do not blot. Allow to "set" for 20 minutes.

And economy-minded women note: Each of the ten shades of "Alive" is available in a refill that is in reality a complete lipstick in itself, temporarily capped in plastic. This self-sufficient "refill" makes it possible for every woman to have a whole wardrobe of lipstick colors at a small outlay of money. All she does is switch the cap from the regular lipstick to another lipstick "body" and she has a second smart lipstick.
