BY LYLE DOWNING

SGT. EARLE W. TICHENOR

Then . . .

Now . . .

Thirty years ago the average peace officer believed there was more law in the end of a policeman's night stick than all the books ever written by Blackstone.

In the intervening years, however, views of police officers have changed drastically and today a formidable trial confronts the law violator — policeman, doctor and attorney. In this era of scientific crime investigation, legal medicine plays a major role in bringing many malefactors to book and solving cases that would have hopelessly baffled the old-time policeman.

One of the principal advocates of the legal-medical approach to criminal investigation in this region is State Police Sgt. Earle Tichenor, who is rounding out 20 years of law enforcement work.

COVERS BIG AREA

Sgt. Tichenor, since 1941, has been in charge of state police operations in Klamath and Lake counties. With a meager staff of 21 men he covers a 30,000 square mile area.

"In the old rough and tumble days of criminal investigation," Sgt. Tichenor declared, "many of the intricate cases we face today would probably not have been solved. This is particularly true in homicide cases."

The sergeant cited several murder cases in Klamath and Lake counties which were cleared up through the aid of legal medicine. "I have known instances," Tichenor said, "when a crime might have been pinned on an innocent person, had it not been for the findings of the county coroner, who has been trained in the field of legal medicine. Today a great many crimes are solved in the laboratory."

In reviewing his 20 years in police service, Sgt. Tichenor looks upon his part in the investigation of the sensational "Lower 13 Murder" as the highlight of his career.

BRINGS JUSTICE

Tichenor helped bring to justice Robert Folkes, Southern Pacific dining car cook, who was convicted of the slaying of a young woman in a lower berth of a Pullman on a train traveling between Portland and San Francisco. Although the crime occurred while the train was in Albany, the major part of the investigation was made in Klamath Falls.

Sgt. Tichenor was born in Portland, July 29, 1913. His first job was as a carpenter's helper when he was 15 years old. After graduating from high school and attending the University of Oregon for one year, Tichenor went to work for the Hudson-Duncan Wholesale Grocery Company. He set up warehouse operations for the firm in Eugene, Corvallis and Bend.

In 1935, he filed an application for a post with the state police. The application was destroyed when the capitol building in Salem burned a short time later. But he filed another application which was acted upon favorably.

Tichenor received his state police appointment in 1936 and after serving in Portland, Oregon City and the Coos Bay area, was promoted to sergeant and transferred to Klamath Falls.

Sgt. and Mrs. Tichenor, who reside at 3910 Summers Lane, have four sons—Earle Jr., 18, Cal, 16 and twins, John and Don, 12.

THE CAMERA CORNER

By BUD RUESSING

These days the sports fan's mind is on football. The weather is right for it, the sports pages are full of it, the air is full of football. To the photographer this suggests action shots. A football game is a great place for picture-taking . . . of the game, of the cheerleaders, of the crowds or the band. You can take these shots with any camera, even without fast shutter speeds.

If you own a simple box camera, you may have tried action shots and come up with a set of blurred prints. Don't let that discourage you completely. You can still get action pictures under certain conditions. For one thing, don't get too close to the action. The further away it is, the "slower." And try some shots "head on," rather than from an angle.

If you do get a slight blurring, this can often be an advantage in an action shot. It will give the effect of movement and speed, which will contrast effectively with the still background. You may lose an occasional picture this way, one that is too blurred. But photography is for fun . . . and you'll have fun with action shots . . . and you may end up with some pictures you'll be proud to show.

The simpler cameras are very versatile. They're right for the beginner, and they're good experience for the hobbyist who wants to experiment. Stop in and see the low cost Argus, Ansco and Kodak models in our display, at

IN THE SKETCH PAD

By CATHERINE BRUMBAUGH

Peri Short, (Mrs. Pat) has only recently been interested in creative art. However, the problem of composition and design has been a part of her life for years, as an expert beauty operator and hair stylist. The study of contour and arrangement for a becoming hairstyle, follows the general basic rules of any other form of art expression.

Peri has also made interior decoration one of her major interests, and their home on North Second Street shows her ability to combine texture and color in a professional manner.

The summer of 1953, Fern joined a Klamath Art Association summer art workshop in "plasti-glaze" a non-firing ceramic material which can be applied to decorative wood or metal surfaces. Fern's careful craftsmanship and aptitude for this medium were rewarded when the instructor, Vera Arnold, wanted to buy some of Fern's finished pieces.

Following this summer, in crafts, Fern attended a night class in art under Howard Holt, and worked in both water color and in pencil sketching.

Two pencil sketches by Fern Short are now on the art exhibit panel in the county library.

Navy Planning Missiles Use

CHICAGO — A high Navy official said Saturday more U.S. cruisers will be armed with guided missiles. He also said "the battleship may have a new future" as a robot weapon vessel.

Under Secretary Thomas S. Gates noted in a speech to the Naval Reserve Assn. that two cruisers are about ready to rejoin the fleet after being remodeled as guided missile ships.

"These," he said, "will be the first visible confirmation of the advent of the missile launched from combatant ships, perhaps the most potent future weapon of the Navy."

Gates said the heavy guided missile cruiser Boston will be commissioned in Philadelphia next Tuesday and that the Canberra "is only a few months behind her" in the conversion process.

In addition to the Boston and Canberra, the Navy has announced plans to convert the light cruiser Galveston and to build three new frigates as missile ships. One guided missile submarine, the Tunny, is in service. A second, the Barbic, was commissioned Friday.

Gates also said the Navy wants more atomic submarines in addition to the eight now built, under construction or on order. He said funds for some will be requested in the next budget to be sent to Congress after it reconvenes in January.

HST Denies Support For Candidates

CHICAGO — Former President Truman said Saturday that he "never told anybody that I would support anybody for the Democratic presidential nomination."

Mr. Truman spoke after a visit with Adlai E. Stevenson, the 1952 Democratic nominee who called on the former president in his hotel suite.

Stevenson faced reporters and cameras with Truman briefly at a news conference, but left after stating that he had dropped in to "pay my respects" to Truman and have a "pleasant chat" which "entered into politics once or twice." Stevenson brushed aside questions on his activities as a potential candidate for the convention nomination next August.

Truman told reporters he had "advised" Stevenson to announce his candidacy. "If he is the nominee of the convention this coming summer," Truman said of Stevenson, "I would support him. I didn't promise to support him before the convention."

The two Democratic leaders were cordial to each other. Stevenson left most of the political discussion to be carried on in his absence.

Asked about his pointing to Gov. Averell Harriman of New York in a recent news conference as a good candidate for president, Truman told reporters: "You should have asked that question while Stevenson was in the room. I would have pointed to him as well as I did to Harriman."

He told reporters "I have no candidates for president or vice president until the convention acts. I don't know how to make it any clearer than that."

Truman asserted that he views his present role as that of a private citizen and a probable member of the Missouri delegation to the Democratic convention.

Truman came to Chicago to address the Chicago Greek Committee for the Truman library and accept support for the project from that organization.

Funds Raised By Corvallis People

CORVALLIS — More than $200 has been raised through contributions for the family of James Applegate, 39-year-old Benton County postman who was shot down while trying to apprehend a Lane County jail escapee.

A memorial fund was started after Applegate died from bullets fired by Martin B. Reynolds, 23, Seattle. The Corvallis Gazette-Times has been accepting the contributions.

Applegate was buried Friday with scores of postmen from his own as well as other counties in attendance.

Rogue River Forest Staff Officer Changes Reported

Jay F. Grant has been selected as staff officer in charge of timber and range management on the position held in recent years by M. L. Tedrow who is soon to be transferred to the Gifford Pinchot Forest in Washington state.

Grant will arrive in Medford about November 7. He is married and the couple has one daughter, Sandra, age 9.

Grant, a native Oregonian, was raised in the Mackenzie River area near Springfield. He was graduated from Oregon State College School of Forestry in 1929, where he also earned a degree in education. His early Forest Service career was spent on the Willamette Forest. In 1935 he served on the Superior Forest in Minnesota, and later on the Shawnee in Illinois. In 1937 he returned to the Willamette, and the following year moved to the Olympic in Northwest Washington.

Grant was promoted to district ranger on the Olympic at Quilicura, Washington, in 1941, where he remained until 1953 except for four years' military service during World War II. He attained the rank of captain in the Army.

Since 1953 Grant has held several positions in timber management work on the Olympic Forest, including a planning and supervisory assignment on the extensive salvage and reforestation project dealing with the Forks Burn which occurred in 1951.

Tedrow will leave Medford in about 20 days to take up his new duties as principal timber management staff officer on the Gifford Pinchot Forest. He will reside in Vancouver, Washington.
