"PHIEW! SOMEBODY NEEDS A BATH!"

Government Quietly Drops Tighter Credit Controls

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government is quietly dropping the policy of ever tighter credit restraints it has enforced most of this year.

Instead, it has adopted an attitude of neutral, watchful waiting in the belief the dangers of inflation which brought on the tougher policy may have been mastered.

If this assessment is correct, and if another inflationary blister does not appear in coming months, the possibility of a tax cut next year becomes a strong probability.

The new attitude has become evident through several changes in government actions—chiefly in Federal Reserve Board policy—in public and private statements of government money managers.

A top government policy maker said privately today he thinks the government's efforts in recent months to head off inflation by curbing excessive credit expansion in the stock market, home building, and other fields had "taken a lot of steam" out of the incipient inflationary pressures of last summer.

He would not talk about the future course of policy, but he agreed with a description of the government position at present as "a withdrawal to neutrality."

This does not mean necessarily that restrictions already in force will be abandoned or even significantly relaxed in the near future. It merely means that new restrictions are unlikely, and that there will be a continued effort to keep the restrictions now in force from creating any credit drought.

With inflationary pressures off, and revenues from a high level of business activity large enough to insure a balanced budget by next June 30, the administration would have little reason, if any, to buck the election year tax cut fever bound to be strong in Congress early next year.

The administration has made the fight against further depreciation of the dollar through inflation the backbone of its economic policy. A tax cut while inflationary pressures were building up would tend to increase inflation by raising purchasing power.

A very high administration official said in a recent private talk that in his opinion President Eisenhower would "have the political courage" to veto any tax cut bill that coincided with a wave of inflation.

From spring through fall of this year the Federal Reserve system turned the credit screw down tighter and tighter with successive hikes in the discount rate—the interest rate at which it lends to member banks to help them lend to their customers. But in recent weeks it has shifted to a more open handed policy, by supplying funds to commercial banks through purchases in the open market of government securities. This has tended in part to nullify the rate boosts by creating new bank reserves.

This new supply of funds coincided with the yearly October peak of business borrowing. The board (has acted to keep its otherwise restrictive policies from trying up credit supplies at the time of greatest demand.

At least partly as a result, the interest rate on 91-day Treasury bills dropped yesterday for the second successive week. The rate on these bills sets the pattern for all interest rates. It had hit a 28-month high Oct. 18.

Police Inspector Reports Change In Widow's Story

NEW YORK (AP)—Mrs. Ann Woodward says it was a noise rather than anything she saw that prompted her to fire the shotgun blast that killed her wealthy sportsman husband, William Woodward Jr.

Propped up in a hospital bed, the attractive blonde widow last night gave authorities details of events leading to the shooting of her husband early Sunday. She broke down when she came to the actual shooting, Nassau County Dist. Atty. Frank Gulotta said, and the questioning was discontinued for the night.

On the day of the shooting, police reported the sobbing and hysterical woman had told them she fired at a figure or shadow, believing it to be a prowler and not recognizing it as her husband.

Inspector Guyevant Pinnell, chief of Nassau County detectives, said the new information that the shot was prompted by a noise was the "major discrepancy" between her original account and her later story.

However, Pinnell had said earlier her original story was virtually "useless" because of her highly disturbed state at the time.

When police arrived at the 15-room Woodward home on a 60-acre Long Island estate, the sobbing and incoherent Mrs. Woodward was clutching in her arms the unclad and bloody body of her husband.

Investigators said she was quickly given a sedative and some hours later was wakened by an injection of a stimulant so police could question her.

Mrs. Woodward, a former model and show girl who married her socialite husband 12 years ago, is still listed as 32 years old by investigators. However school records and relatives in her hometown of Pittsburg, Kans., indicate she is about 39.

Her millionaire husband was 35, Tall, quiet and reserved, he was a member of one of New York's most blue-blooded families and the owner of the famed racehorse Nashua.

Just an hour or so before the shooting the Woodwards had returned from a party given for the Duchess of Windsor at an estate near their own weekend home at Oyster Bay on Long Island's fashionable North Shore.

Pinnell said the investigation would include questioning of other party guests and of Woodward's mother, who might shed light on the relations between her daughter-in-law and son.

Gulotta said the marital background of the Woodwards was one of the aspects of the case that still needed investigation.

There were newspaper reports the marriage had been a stormy one, with separations and threatened divorce. There were also reports that both had employed private detectives to keep an eye on each other, but neither turned out to be involved with other men or women.

Police Give Windy City Murder Lead

CHICAGO (UP)—Chicago policemen journeyed far into Northern Wisconsin today to question two "strange acting" men about the sadistic murder of three young boys.

The men were arrested Monday night in an abandoned farm house four miles north of Ladysmith, Wis. They were identified as Charles Driscoll, 19, and Ed Kline, 30, both of Chicago.

Sheriff Peter Sybers said the men had been living in the abandoned house, even though it contained nothing but a bed, one blanket, and a stove.

The men "acted strangely" when Sybers awoke them and put them under arrest the sheriff said. They did not ask why they were being picked up for questioning at the request of Chicago police, he reported.

Chicago detectives John Bickler and Art Kelly set out on a 400-mile all-night drive to Ladysmith to question the two men, Sybers said he would not grill the prisoners until the Chicago officers arrived.

The Wisconsin arrests were the latest development in the baffling manhunt for the killers of Robert Peterson, 13, John Schuessler, 13, and his 11-year-old brother, Anton.

The boys were strangled or beaten to death on Chicago's northwest side on Oct. 16. Their nude, mutilated bodies were found stacked in a forest preserve ditch.

Chicago police asked for the arrest of Driscoll and Kline when they learned from a tipster that Driscoll had given up his factory job and left town on Oct. 20, two days after the bodies were discovered.

Further investigation showed that Driscoll and Kline were together the night of the murder, police said. Officers said the two men also frequented riding stables in the area and were well acquainted with Robinson's woods, where the bodies were found.

Driscoll told friends in Chicago he was "going to blow town and head for Florida for the winter," police said. Instead, he and Kline drove to Ladysmith in Kline's 1947 Oldsmobile.

Eye witnesses have reported they saw a battered car of similar vintage in the area where the boys' bodies were found.

Driscoll told Sybers he came to Ladysmith to visit with his grandmother. The two men had worked for a Ladysmith farmer for "several days," they said, and then moved into the vacant house.

ELMO YOUNG, longtime resident of Klamath, and Siskiyou counties celebrated his 70th birthday in Klamath Falls on October 26. Young, a bachelor, was in town from Tulelake. He worked for many years for the Haskins family of Merrill and the late Raymond Taylor in Barnes Valley. He lives alone with his 18-year-old horse Tony, and his eight year old dog, Bouncer. While here he was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Baldwin.

Ship Battles Alaska Seas

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—A Navy tug Tuesday was en route to the side of the crippled Greek freighter Macedonia reported bucking heavy North Pacific seas south of the Aleutian Islands.

The Alaska Air Command said the tug Molala was dispatched from Adak, Alaska, Monday after the Macedonia radioed it had a damaged propeller blade and engine trouble. The ship was about 300 miles off Attu Island. The AAG said it may take three days to reach its side.

The ship was on route from Japan to Vancouver, B.C.

The Macedonia was the second vessel to call for help in the North Pacific Monday. The American freighter Flying Eagle radioed she had a leak in her hull but cancelled the distress call when the steamship P and T Navigator arrived at the scene to help. The Flying Eagle is an 8,199-ton freighter owned by the Isbrandsten Line.

Dunsmuir Hold Party Parade

DUNSMUIR — Witches, space men, assorted animals, dancing girls, clowns, tramps and a variety of freaks turned out en masse for the Halloween parade held in downtown Dunsmuir on Saturday afternoon. The event, an inspiration of Mrs. Marie Glover of Marie's Dress Shop, was a great success with ice cream bars and balloons for about 300 participating youngsters.

The judges who will probably be haunted for days faced a terrific task in awarding prizes. Bravely attacking the job were Mrs. Josephine McGee, Mrs. Emma Smith and Mrs. Harriet Spatafora. Identification of prize winners was attempted then given up.

Assisting in keeping a semblance of order were members of elementary school PTA including Mrs. Veronica Kelby, Mrs. Claudia Mather, Mrs. R. Ellis, Mrs. Lola Bechtel, Mrs. E. I. Tausch and Mrs. Betty Van Wormer.

Dunsmuir police did a bit of good natured traffic directing.
