LONDON 1st — Princess Margaret's decision to give up Peter Townsend sent a wave of mixed emotions racing through the British Isles today.

Public and press reaction was compounded of resentment, approval, and downright confusion. Some newspapers predicted an outbreak of popular feeling against the Church of England and the Duke of Edinburgh — both strongly identified by many Britons with the unhappy ending of the romance.

Among those of conservative views, Margaret was warmly praised for putting her duty to the throne, church, and British commonwealth above her normal desire to marry the man she loves.

To the great mass of the British people, the big question appeared to be the human one: "Is the Princess now condemned
