

Pumpkin Jelly

Nothing is more American than pumpkin. Perhaps the most typical way of serving pumpkin is in pie. However, for a change, here is a new way of using pumpkin for dessert. It can be used either at a festive buffet party or for the family. It is called Pumpkin Jelly and is a molded dessert using the usual spices plus orange juice which adds a distinctive, unusual flavor.

This attractive dessert is another example of how dairy foods can be used to add flavor and interest. Not only does milk give Pumpkin Jelly the creamy, smooth consistency, but it also increases the nutritive value. Every day articles are appearing in the daily press and in other publications telling of the virtues of milk in the daily diet. It is certain that the need for enough milk each day is very important, but it is the wise homemaker who also uses milk in food preparation. Some of our most delicious dishes, desserts especially, have milk as a basic ingredient.

PUMPKIN JELLY

1 tablespoon gelatin
1 cup cold water
1 cup pumpkin

1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon ginger
Pinch of salt
1 teaspoon orange extract or 3 tablespoons orange juice
1 1/2 cups milk
1/2 pint whipping cream

Soak gelatin in cold water. Put pumpkin into saucepan and stir over high heat until slightly caramelized or dried out. Reduce heat; add sugar, spices, salt and milk. Add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Pour mixture into a 9-cup mold rinsed with cold water and chill until firm. Unmold onto a large plate and garnish with whipped cream. Makes six servings.

SUMMER CLOTHES

Before packing your summer "starchables" away for the winter, launder them and blue the white clothes, but don't starch or iron them, advise home economists. When you're ready to use them next year add a small cake of blue wax ironing aid to each quart of hot starch. The clothes will come out fresh and sparkling after one ironing.

A SEWING BREAKFAST is a wonderful way to gather a few close neighbors together to get that pile of socks and the children's clothing back in condition again. After the youngsters are off to school and the man of the house to business, heat cans of your favorite soup and serve crackers and cheese or little tiered sandwiches of Danish Blue Cheese which is so complimentary to the friendly flavor of soup for your Sip-and-Sew Breakfast.
