

BEING A FIRST GRADER is most exciting, especially if home is a modern new trailerhouse where a younger brother lives too and if both mother and dad are professional entertainers. Blonde, blue-eyed Lynn Turigliotto, is going to school at the Twyla Ferguson elementary building in the South Suburban area. Home is at the Mountain Vu Trailer Court on the Merrill Highway. Her father, known to Klamath Falls as owner of "The Tommy Parks Manhattans," now teaches 140 Klamath County boys and girls to play the accordion. Lynn, who was six last June 22, is a native of California. Upper right, Harley Hyatt, driver of the school bus from Twyla Ferguson, lets the little girl off the bus at the edge of the highway. Five-year-old brother, Larry, back to camera, eagerly awaits her return from school. Center left, Lynn's first report card, sprinkled with "A's" is looked over by her mother. Center inset, Lynn cuddles collie pup Ring, while brother Larry debates about petting the pooch. Center right, Lynn aboard the upper deck of the double beds in the compact little bedroom for the children is ready for an after school nap. Lower left, she gets the "tangles" combed from her curls before dinner time. Lower right, family around the dinner table. The trailer home is as attractive as a small apartment. has two bedrooms, bath, lots of storage space and even a TV set for watching "Big John and Sparkie."
