

Peronista Labor Leaders Fight With Government

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Argentina's anti-Peron government and Peronista labor leaders were still locked in a struggle for supremacy today. Thousands of workers obeyed the Peronista's general strike call, but other thousands ignored it.

The new provisional government headed by Maj. Gen. Pedro Aramburu, which took over Sunday after ousting Gen. Eduardo Lonardi from the presidency, arrested 146 persons in the Buenos Aires district alone for inciting people to strike, capital police said.

McLeod Gets Recall Bid At Hearing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scott McLeod, the State Department's security chief, was called back to a Senate hearing today to tell "who actually made the decisions" in denying three disputed passports.

Chairman Hennings (D-Mo) asked for the information yesterday as McLeod appeared before the Senate subcommittee on constitutional rights.

McLeod, whose duties include general supervision over the Passport Division, said he didn't know. He was told to find out and report back.

He told reporters later he did not know whether he could furnish the information, if he found out, because of a presidential order holding certain matters in the executive department confidential.

The cases involved are those of Dr. Linus C. Pauling, California Institute of Technology scientist and Nobel Prize winner; Judge William Clark, former chief judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit; and Martin D. Kamen, professor at Washington University in St. Louis.

The subcommittee said denial of passports was one of the specific points it wanted to study when it set out this week on a planned three-week series of hearings on "areas of erosion" in the freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution. McLeod said in the first 10 months of this year, 473,703 passports had been issued or renewed. A total of 401 had been refused, he said. Of these, 300 were denied because of lack of proof of citizenship and others on various grounds such as Communist activities, mental illness, criminal record or previous conduct abroad such as to bring discredit on the United States.

Aires district alone for inciting people to strike, capital police said. The Aramburu regime met the strike challenge in a showdown fight with the big General Confederation of Labor (CGT), which was the main support of Juan D. Peron, Argentina's former dictator. The government declared the strike, which started at midnight Monday, "is failing."

But the fact remained that the walkout hit hardest in some of the more essential industries, such as meat packing, metal working and petroleum.

The question seemed to be who could strike the longer—the government faced with steadily dropping stocks of meats and other supplies, or the workers who are losing more pay every day.

The armed forces, which are guarding key points in industrial centers of the country to prevent any outbreaks of violence, were posted last night in the big Retiro railroad station in downtown Buenos Aires. Firemen also were assigned to the station. Unconfirmed reports said the railway workers would strike the strike today.

The government outlawed the strike, and warned that those inciting the walkout would be jailed. Those arrested were said to include high officials of CGT. They were held incommunicado.

The strike picture across the country looked about like this: Essential services such as light, power, and transportation were scarcely affected. This also went for restaurants, movies, bars, and a host of lesser activities.

Confidential but generally accurate reports gave these percentages of absenteeism in the Buenos Aires area: Meat plants, 100 per cent; glass working, 100 per cent; soap plants, 100; rubber, 90; petroleum, 90; breweries, 90; textiles, 80; metal working, 70; chemicals, 70; leather, 40; bakers, 35; food workers, 30; electricity, 30; paper workers, 20; public power, 15; printing, 10; train workers, 5; other transport workers, 5; wood workers, 5.

Industries in Avellaneda, Azul, San Martin and San Justo — all near Buenos Aires — were totally closed. But in the interior cities of Mendoza, Chaco, La Pampa and Mendoza, work was reported normal.
