Oregon May See Adlai On Primary

PORTLAND (U. S. State Democratic Chairman Howard Morgan, who returned Sunday from a national committee meeting at Chicago, said that Adlai Stevenson may enter the Democratic presidential primaries in Oregon.

The state is under "active consideration" by Stevenson's staff, Morgan reported. Stevenson's name could be placed in nomination here without his consent, Morgan said, however, that he was hopeful that no Democratic candidate would be nominated without their approval.

Morgan said he had conferred with the three leading Democrats mentioned for the nomination—Stevenson, Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn.) and Gov. Averell Harriman of New York.

Stevenson announced his candidacy last week. Kefauver is expected to announce his decision next month, and Harriman has stated he is not "actively" seeking the nomination.

Morgan said he had assured the three that Democratic Party officials in Oregon would be neutral in the event more than one of them was entered in the May 18 Oregon primary.

Speaking as an individual, and not as a party official, Morgan last month criticized Harriman for his close association with Carmine DeSapio, head of New York's Tammany Hall.

Asked if this criticism had been discussed at the Chicago meeting, Morgan replied only that this had been one of the "most pleasant, fruitful and constructive trips" he had ever made in behalf of the Democratic Party.

Car Wrecks Reported In Basin

Five traffic accidents occurring on Sunday and early this morning were reported today by Klamath Falls and Oregon State Police.

As a result of these accidents, four persons were slightly injured. Robert F. Smith, 1813 Ivory Street, suffered bruises when an auto he was driving collided with a snowplow at Larf and South Sixth streets. The plow, according to the city police report, was stopped while the operator, Stanley G. Smith, 640 Elcorado, was replacing a manhole cover which had been dislodged by the blade of the plow. The blue warning light was burning, police said.

Smith's auto was heading north, police said. There was no damage to the plow.

Two persons were slightly injured in an accident at Ward and Bryant streets at 8:20 p.m. Sunday, state police reported. They were Cathy Broyles, 15, address unknown, and Vivian Compton, 408 Oak Street. Miss Broyles was a passenger in an auto driven by William Duane Stienor, 4709 Bisslee, and Mrs. Compton was riding in an auto driven by William Avery Compton, her husband.

The two autos collided at the intersection of Ward and Bryant streets, police said. Three other passengers in Stienor's auto were uninjured.
