Santa Cruz DA Claims "Frameup"

PALO ALTO (UP) — Charles L. Moore Jr., the embattled young attorney of Santa Cruz County, claims that a Grand Jury move to oust him from office is a "complete frameup."

Moore appeared yesterday at a press conference called by his attorney, Melvin Bell, to discuss accusations of misconduct filed against him last week by the Santa Cruz County Grand Jury.

Moore faces trial in January on the four accusations. If found guilty, he can be removed from office.

The 28-year-old district attorney said the accusations had "no basis."

"I can accept no other explanation than that this is a political conspiracy against me," he said, adding that both the Grand Jury and County Supervisors are opposed to him.

Moore denied that he borrowed $1000 from his onetime "vice consultant," Raymond Jehl. He admitted, however, that he borrowed $1000 from Charles Mutchler, whom he described as a retired salesman.

It developed, however, that Mutchler is an ex-convict who has served prison terms for rape, manslaughter and parole violations. He was convicted in Fresno in 1921 of assaulting a 16-year-old girl while a member of a gang accused of widespread burglary and terrorism.

Moore said he borrowed the money in November, 1954, and repaid it last spring with money borrowed from a San Francisco bank.

Asked about Mutchler's record, Moore said he had checked it and found that "it doesn't show anything." Mutchler, like Jehl, was a close supporter of Moore's campaign, and now acts as an unpaid investigator.

Moore also disclosed he has five investigators working full time investigating members of the Grand Jury. He rejected one accusation by the Grand Jury that he had charged three of its members with having "vice connections."

What he meant was, he explained, three of its members had "social connections" with persons involved in vice. He said:

"My investigators have turned up continued social connections with a vice element so big that it happens to be Watsonville's second big income producing business, topped only by agriculture."

Students Tour Navy Sites

ALAMEDA (UP)—Twenty-five high school students from Fresno began a three-day tour of Bay Area naval installations today as guests of the Navy and the Navy League.

The students arrived at the Alameda Naval Air Station to take part in the league's "Navy Buddy program" designed to familiarize young Americans with the Navy. During their stay here the young men will be billeted aboard the aircraft carrier USS Yorktown.

The tour includes visits to the San Francisco Naval Shipyard, units of the Pacific Reserve mothball fleet, submarine training facilities, the Alameda station and a cruise around the bay aboard a Navy tug.

The group was officially welcomed on its arrival by John J. Mulvaney, president of the Northern California Navy League; Capt. W. S. Heald, representing Rear Adm. John R. Redman, commandant, 12th Naval District, and Cmdr. D. M. Hizer, executive officer of Alameda NAS.

Mental Patient Found Strangled

NAPA (UP)—Authorities investigated today the death, apparently by strangulation, of a 12-year-old patient at the Napa State Mental Hospital.

The boy, Robert R. Yarak of San Jose, was found dead in bed Saturday night in a ward housing about 35 boys.

Dr. Theo K. Miller, superintendent of the hospital, said three other patients in the ward were being questioned. He said they were moved to separate detention quarters and were under guard.

Miller said Yarak suffered from schizophrenia. He said the illness left the boy unable to talk.
