

Demo Leaders May Seek Moderation Policy As To Criticism Of Eisenhower

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—Three Senate Democratic leaders may seek next week a policy of "moderation" in political criticism of the Eisenhower administration's foreign and defense programs.

Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.), the majority leader, has arranged to confer in Atlanta with Georgia Democratic Senators George and Russell, chairmen of the Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services committees respectively.

Johnson already has warned his party against being "overly partisan, overly quarrelsome and obsessed solely with politics."

There are strong indications that George and Russell agree with Johnson that the times call for "moderation"—despite what some Democratic presidential hopefuls are saying.

Governors Averell Harriman of New York and G. Mennen Williams of Michigan have criticized that approach, suggested by Adlai E. Stevenson.

The three senators wield strong influence on the form of legislation which the Democratic-controlled Congress may pass in the election year session. They will have much to say about the kind of record on which the Democratic presidential candidate will have to run.

George indicated in a telephone interview from his Georgia home that he can't go along with some of the recent remarks of both Stevenson and Harriman on foreign affairs.

Although he has approved criticism of "inept" Republican actions in the foreign field, he has cautioned against involving the fundamental principles of bipartisanship.

foreign policy in the political campaign.

Stevenson, who again wants to head the Democratic ticket as he did in 1952, said recently that the free world's position now is "more perilous than it has been since Korea." Harriman, a receptive candidate for the nomination, said the Geneva conference enabled the Russians to achieve a "major political breakthrough."

George said that while the world situation is "not too stable, I do not think we are any worse off."

"There are some conditions that are not too happy and there has been lack of progress, of course, but I have the feeling there isn't anything that is materially worse from our standpoint," he said.

No Congress Action Seen

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Ives (R-N.Y.) said today he doubts there will be any major labor legislation passed in the next session of Congress.

Ives, a veteran member of the Senate Labor Committee, said in an interview he expects President Eisenhower to propose again in his State of the Union message some amendments aimed at "liberalizing" the Taft-Hartley Act.

"But when the committee gets around to working on them, someone is certain to propose an amendment making job discrimination on a racial basis an unfair labor practice and the Southern Democrats just won't let anything like that get past them," Ives said.

The New York senator added that he believes consideration of Taft-Hartley amendments also would provoke a move from conservatives to take away some of the federal government's authority in this field and turn it back to the states.

"With the situation as it is, I just don't see how we can pass any major labor legislation," he said.

Reclamation Projects In West Total $250 Million

By JOHN KAMPS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Work started under reclamation contracts gave the nation's economy a $250-million-dollar shot in the arm during the year ended June 30.

So says Secretary of the Interior McKay, commenting on a federal Reclamation Bureau report on construction and other contracts for water resource development in fiscal 1955.

The bureau said work done under reclamation contracts provided a quarter-billion dollars of purchasing power.

It reported completion of irrigation facilities to serve 315,000 acres of land, 785 miles of canals, pipe lines, laterals and ditches, 133,500 kilowatts of hydroelectric generating capacity and more than 470 miles of electrical transmission lines.

During the year, 482 contracts with total face value of 46 million dollars were awarded for construction, materials, equipment and supplies. The investment in the new construction work and related development totaled 152 million dollars, and 186 construction contracts existing at the end of the year had a value of 145 million, the report said.

The report said crops harvested in the reclamation project areas valued at 750 million dollars in calendar 1954—contributed to the nation's food supply and the nation's buying power.

Construction highlights of fiscal 1955 included completion of the Eklutna project and the 30,000-kilowatt Eklutna power plant in Alaska.

The irrigation system of the Columbia Basin project in Washington State was extended to serve 61,000 acres through completion of 333 miles of canals, laterals and wasteways. The system now irrigates 247,000 acres of land.

The bureau plans this fiscal year to continue work on projects which will extend irrigation water to 120,400 acres of new land, supply supplemental water to 82,900 acres already under irrigation and increase power generating capacity by 120,000 kilowatts.

Among big projects scheduled to be completed by mid-1956 are the Colorado Big Thompson, except for the project's power plant.

Youth Dies Of Accidental Burns

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Lawrence Booth, 14, was burned to death accidentally yesterday by four companions with whom he was playing cowboys in suburban Drexel Hill, police said.

Booth, playing the part of the "bad man," had barricaded himself in a wooden shack when a posse came after him.

The others decided to "smoke him out," and lighted some straw mattress stuffing at several points around the shack, said Detective Sgt. Chester Saunders.

The boy was not able to get out of the shack, which was swiftly enveloped in flames, and his companions were unable to help him.

Six Die When Train Hits Car

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)—A train moving 75 m.p.h. smashed into a car at a grade crossing yesterday, killing six persons.

The only survivor in the car was a 10-month-old baby. None of the passengers aboard the Southern Railway's Crescent, headed for New York, were injured.

The dead were James P. Brooks, 37; his wife Louise, 26, driver of the car; Mrs. Louise Bagwell, mother of Mrs. Brooks; Holland Benny Sutton, 29; his wife Rosa Lee, 23; and their daughter Wanda, 3.

The baby, Beeny Sutton, suffered minor injuries.

United Press Writer Says Warren Not Candidate For President, Now Or Ever

A United Press Extra

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—To put it perhaps too bluntly, why would a man quit a job with an assured annual income of $46,545.34 and the privilege of retiring on full pay in a few years?

And if this fortunate person's present job was rated by many of his colleagues as the most desirable in the whole world, wouldn't that be another reason why he might want to keep it?

And if this individual already had announced publicly that he would not change jobs for anything on earth, would not the whole circumstances of the case suggest that he would keep it, come what may?

The man, of course, is the chief justice of the United States, Earl Warren. These ponderings are prompted by the current report in a well-edited national magazine that Mr. Warren can be had. Newsweek put it like this:

"Chief Justice Earl Warren will run if pressed—this is the definite impression brought away from Warren's chambers by recent visitors—including at least one who is anti-Warren and had predicted he would not run."

Maybe so! But the last United Press operative who talked to Mr. Warren quite recently, too—got it the other way around. The chief justice said with considerable vigor that he would not return to politics as Republican presidential nominee or anything else. He added that he thought he might have to issue another public statement saying just that if the Warren boom failed to subside.

The chief justice deflated a boom some months ago when polls showed him far and away the Republican and independent voters' favorite if President Eisenhower did not run. Mr. Eisenhower's illness inflated the boom all over again, and Mr. Warren has been trying to puncture it by authorizing friends to utter his denials.

There is much more, of course, than money involved in any decision Mr. Warren might make. Money might not influence him at all, in fact. But it is true that the young man who began his political career back there in 1919 as clerk to a California legislative committee is coming only now to know what it means to be secure and financially independent.

Mr. Warren drew $25,000 a year and fringe benefits during his 10 years as governor of California just prior to joining the court. But he had three daughters and any father of daughters can figure that out.

He draws $35,000 a year as chief justice plus California pension which totals up to $11,545.34 a year. The United States tosses in a limousine and chauffeur, and there's $5,000 for life for Mrs. Warren if the chief justice dies in office. After 10 years on the bench—that would be in 1953—Mr. Warren could retire at full pay.

Television View Broken Up By Car

ARDMORE, Okla. (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Moss learned it's not even safe to spend a Saturday night at home watching television.

While the Mosses sat looking at the TV screen an automobile crashed into their living room. The car, out of control, passed between the surprised couple who were sitting on opposite sides of the room. The uninvited guest swept a large divan, a chair and stove along with it before coming to rest at the other end of the living room.

Neither the driver nor the Mosses were hurt. Damage was estimated at $500. The car had careened into the Moss home after sideswiping another auto outside.

KF Weather Affects Employment

Recent cold weather and snow interrupted a long period of high employment in the Klamath area, reported Guy Barker, manager of the Klamath Falls office of the Oregon State Employment Service. Logging and outside construction laid off approximately 400 men following the season's first big snow in November. Most construction workers and some loggers were called back to work with loss of only one or two weeks time.

"The average unemployment figures for November, 1955, are approximately 65 per cent below those of November, 1954," Barker said.

More than 25 per cent of the logging operations have resumed after a short shutdown. Sawmills have made some reduction in employment since November 1, but employment remains high for this season of the year, he declared.

During November, 1954, unemployed workers claimed 2,562 weeks of unemployment compared with 990 claimed during November of this year. More than 37 per cent of the workers registered for work in the local office are not drawing unemployment benefits.

"We find that many more of those filing claims for unemployment this year have returned to work than during 1954," Barker commented.

"Although we may be faced with a long winter, we believe that employers' determination to operate whenever possible will keep unemployment at a lower figure than we have had for several years. Job openings received by this office in November dropped 78 per cent from October figures, but were still 33 per cent above those received during November, 1954."

"List your job openings with the local employment office at 242 Main," advised Barker. "Call 7701. Only tested and screened applicants will be referred to you. Several young veterans recently discharged are available for career jobs," he added.

The advertiser's highest standard—of circulation value

Every industry has a standard by which its products can be measured.

The jeweler uses the symbol of a pure diamond. In flatware, the word "sterling," and in dinnerware, the word "bone china," represent high standards of quality and value.

For the advertiser, the symbol of the highest standard of circulation value is the emblem of the Audit Bureau of Circulations*. This hallmark means that newspapers or periodicals so identified are measured according to the most highly regarded rules and standards in the advertising and publishing industry.

The fact that we are privileged to display this A.B.C. emblem here means that you can buy advertising in this newspaper as you would make any other sound business investment—on the basis of well known standards, known values.
