

Waist-Level Storage Saves Stooping

UNUSUAL new food storage conveniences are reflected in advanced refrigerator design for 1956. This 14.3-cubic-foot Frigidaire has 9.5 cubic feet of storage space at waist-level or above for storing most-used foods. Handy "picture window" vegetable Hydrator swings out of door. Freezer at bottom holds 168 pounds of frozen food. It is equipped with an amazing new ice service that delivers several pounds of ready-to-use ice cubes in a matter of seconds.

Oven Smoke And Fumes Do Vanishing Act

LATEST development for electric ranges in a 1956 is a smokeless, fume-free oven. This Frigidaire range has two ovens, both equipped with a revolutionary new smoke dispelling system. Miracle filter in oven vent eliminates cooking smoke and fumes before oven air is discharged into the kitchen. Roll-out shelves in the ovens glide out on ball bearings.

Longer Life

Scientists have discovered the secret of a long life — and discovered that it's been around all the time and it's free. You just have to want to live. That can override everything but the final death sentence. Tranquility is the best medicine, the December Catholic Digest reports, in an article which gives eight rules for a longer life:

"Quit worrying about your health. Have a physical check-up and if it reveals no serious organic difficulty, accept the verdict sensibly and gratefully.

"Have fun. Play is perhaps the soundest and safest way we have for working off aggression. Enjoy work but don't live solely for it. Everyone needs work to be content but it is a mistake to make it the be-all and end-all of existence.

"Conquer your work jitters: don't make a federal case out of every problem. Quit fretting over minor crises. Most of them will be forgotten next week, anyway.

"Keep life simple. Quit wanting so much. And if things are not all-fired bad that you cannot be content, stop moping and do something about them. Make the most out of right now. Enjoy each moment and explore it for cheerful aspects.

"Make family life mutually enjoyable. To establish such an atmosphere, there must be mutual affection, equality, and kindly cheerfulness. And — don't blow your top. No matter what you've heard about the value of blowing off steam, it is destructive. It is almost sure to wreck something and in the wreckage may be a potentially pleasant experience."

New Frigidaire Line Shown At Fifth Annual Turkey Day

The new 1956 Frigidaire line of ranges, refrigerators and laundry equipment was unveiled at Cascade Home Furnishings, 124 North Fourth, the Tuesday after Thanksgiving.

Vern Owens postponed his annual Turkey Sandwich Day until November 29 in order that his guests might see the new appliances in the Frigidaire line at the same time.

More than 500 persons were guests of the store between 11 a.m. and the 5:30 closing hour. Five 30-pound turkeys had been cooked under the supervision of LaVerne Slusser, home demonstrator for the store, and turkey sandwiches were made by two banquet waitresses with Ed Miller in chef's hat busily slicing the turkey. Sixty loaves of white and whole wheat bread were consumed and the crowd drank more than 30 gallons of coffee.

Assisting Owens and LaVerne in greeting the guests were Catherine Parkhurst, Ed Lee, John Fee-bach and Al Nanneman of the regular staff.

The pink Imperial washer and dryer set brought old and ahs from Klamath Basin homemakers and early in the day "Sold" signs went up on many of the Frigidaire models displayed on the floor. The new pastel shades have been designed to bring harmonious color into the kitchen and laundry.

The most modern, up-to-date homemaking equipment in the world is now available in Klamath Falls.

To those who attended the fifth annual Turkey Sandwich Day and to the newcomers in Klamath Falls, Vern Owens says: "We'll see you next year, along about Turkey Day." In the meantime, he invites everyone to stop in and see the new Frigidaire line "any time you are in the neighborhood."
