Morse Calls For Sharing Of National Surplus Grain

PENLETON — Backward nations of the world should be offered a share of America's surplus grain and other foods as a basis for negotiating investment opportunities for our businessmen, Senator Wayne Morse, Democrat of Oregon, declared here Saturday.

Senator Morse delivered one of the principal talks at the 23rd annual convention of Oregon Wheat Growers League.

"The danger signals have been posted on our economic highway," Morse said. "One of them is found in the fact that the parity ratio declined one per cent on November 15. This is seven per cent under a year ago and the lowest ratio since October, 1946."

Morse went on record during his talk as supporting the domestic parity or the so-called two-price parity plan. He added that the view on congress at present on the two-price parity plan could stand improvement.

On the subject of food surpluses, Morse said we should look upon them as blessings.

"It is true that our surpluses, may not be managed to the greatest advantage at present," he said. "However, surpluses stand as a sort of a national granary in case of emergency and constitute one of the best sources of goodwill available to our nation."

In disposing of food surpluses, Senator Morse recommended that they be used as a means of stimulating capitalistic investments abroad.

"If we can increase the investments of capitalism abroad," he continued, "we can give the greatest assurance of political freedom abroad. Here, then, is fertile area for the production of goodwill. Our government should cultivate this long-neglected field."

Investment opportunities in India. It could apply in building a dam, a power plant and whatever else is needed in some locality to help raise the standard of living. Surely, it is possible to make long-time loan arrangements under reasonable economic trade treaties with India so there will be no exploitation, but fair profits can be realized.

Local Girls Take Exams

Six Klamath Union High School girls were among the 3,225 contestants from 140 Oregon schools who took examinations on December 6 in the Betty Crocker Search for the American Homemaker of Tomorrow, according to Clara Shapard, home economics instructor at the school.

The local girls were Nancy Cox, Frances Summers, Vickie Durham, Elizabeth Egan, Norma Welman and Barbara Jacobson.

The state winner, with her adviser, will tour Washington, colonial Williamsburg, Virginia, and Philadelphia April 8-12 when interviews will combine with the best score in determining the All-American Homemaker of Tomorrow who will be selected on April 12 in Philadelphia. Her scholarship will be increased to $5,000.

This year the national contest attracted a startling total of 256,534 home-minded graduating girls in 10,222 of the nation's high schools. This is a large increase over the participation last year when 187,463 girls in 8,049 schools were enrolled.

General Mills credits part of this year's increase to the impact the program has made on the entire school curriculum. Midwood High School in Brooklyn has the distinction of having the largest number of girls enrolled this year — 550. New York leads the states in most schools, entered with 597 and the most girls with 18,197. California has just one less, 18,196.

The sponsoring company, General Mills, estimates that eight out of every 10 of these girls will make homemaking their career.
