Sen. Wayne Morse Most Active Of Politicians

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sen. Wayne Morse was the most active political figure in Oregon in the week Dec. 4-10 although a mid-week cold cut into several of his scheduled appearances.

Sen. Neuberger also spoke at a number of meetings during the week.

There was considerable state-level political activity, too, which took some of the attention away from national affairs.

Gov. Patterson, noting a question had been raised whether a judgment against Multnomah County Sheriff Terry Schrunk required that he declare the office vacant, asked Atty. Gen. Robert Y. Thornton for an opinion.

In connection with a court appeal from the judgment, Schrunk said among other things that the suit was politically motivated. Don Eva, Portland attorney who handled the case on which the judgment was given, replied that the sheriff should reorganize his office although "it might take some time from his outside activities to do so."

Schrunk has been mentioned as a possible Democratic candidate for secretary of state. Eva is a former president of the Oregon Republican Club.

The only avowed candidate for secretary of state Republican Mark Hatfield, got his campaign under way with distribution to the press of a folder containing biographical material and his announcement comment.

Howard Morgan, state Democratic chairman, said he had asked the Air Force to look into improper use of National Guard planes by the governor's office. This led to an exchange in which Gov. Patterson issued a denial of any impropriety and Elmo Smith, Senate president, said Morgan was so wrapped up in what he called "investigationitis" he had not tried to find out that the National Guard plane Smith took to a Republican meeting was on a training flight. Morgan said the reply was not satisfactory and he hoped the Air Force would put an end to such trips.

Phil Hitchcock, the former state senator from Klamath Falls who now is on the Lewis and Clark College staff, continued his public appearances. Although his addresses were on non-political topics, it was noted that at the close of last week the Republican State Central Committee distributed an abstract of one of his talks to a church group. He is not an announced candidate for any office although his name is often mentioned as one who might seek office.

Dr. A. L. Strand, president of Oregon State College, told students there will be no censorship, that it is assumed students are able to listen to politicians without need for protection and that when politicians are invited to the campus they are expected to talk politics.

Strand said Gov. Averell Harriman's talk at the University of Oregon recently was a flop so far as students were concerned because he didn't talk politics.

The first of four planned campaign schools conducted by the Republicans were held Saturday at Roseburg and Salem. Two more are planned later for the state's other congressional districts.

The chairman of the Reed Republican Club, Paul Kerrigan, said he was arranging to get petitions which would put President Eisenhower's name on the Oregon residential preference primary ballot. Interior Secretary McKay, here briefly, said the only people who don't want Ike to seek reelection are Adlai Stevenson and Averell Harriman.

Vernon Cook of Gresham, state president of the Young Democrats, announced that Sen. Estes Kefauver, a prospective presidential candidate, will speak next April at the Oregon Young Democrats convention. His appearance here will be less than a month before the Oregon primary election.

On the opening day of the Hoover Commission hearing, Sen. Morse attacked the water resources report as "echoes of a discredited past." Morse spoke also at Cottage Grove and Portland, cancelled two apnearances because of a severe cold, and arranged to have a scheduled address at Pendleton read to the Oregon Wheat League meeting. In that talk he said solution of the farm problem calls for non-political consideration.

Sen. Neuberger in the course of his week's appearances, told the Portland Central Labor Council welfare benefits should be broadened.

A MILLION DOLLAR smile was turned on KFLW Announcer Hank Henry when he met Ann Southern, radio and TV star, at Klamath Falls Municipal Airport Friday night. Miss Southern landed in a United Air Lines plane from Hollywood en route to Macdoel to inspect the 13,000-acre Meiss Ranch in which she has a financial interest. Shown with her and Henry is Miss Southern's daughter, Patricia Sterling. Accompanying the star and her daughter were Hollywood Attorney J. B. Rosenthal, his wife and daughter, Susan.

Ex KF Priest Hurt In Crash

ONTARIO, Ore. (AP) — The Rev. Pat J. Meskill, recuperating from a highway accident, told Saturday how he climbed a snow-covered 400-foot embankment down which his car plunged, to get aid.

Father Meskill, assistant pastor of Blessed Sacrament Catholic Church here, was in good condition at a hospital. He suffered only shock and exposure.

The priest said he was driving toward a mission at Juntura when he ran into a blinding snowstorm Thursday night. He lost control of the car and it slid off the road, rolling over several times. The next thing he knew, he was out of the automobile down the bank, thrown free.

Father Meskill estimated it took him 2½ hours to grope his way upward to the road. Two truck drivers from Boise saw him waving his hand and stopped. They took him to Joyce Home near Juntura, which notified the pastor, the Rev. Frank McCormack. Father Meskill then was moved to the hospital.

The accident happened on a mountain pass some 85 miles west of here. The car was demolished.

Father Meskill was assistant to Monsignor Timothy P. Casey of Sacred Heart Parish here from September 1953 to January 1, 1955. He was then sent to Ontario by the Most Rev. Francis P. Leipzig, bishop of the Baker Diocese.

Father Meskill is a native of Ireland. He came directly from Ireland to Klamath Falls.

Bonney Expects No Ski Tow Today

Rainfall Saturday morning made it impractical to operate the Moore Park ski tow or the Conger Field sled two all day Saturday, Bob Bonney, city recreation director, reported.

Bonney said that the facilities would be operated today if conditions permitted.

He added that if conditions permitted, sled guards would be posted at the Washington, Wilford and Manzanita sled areas from 10 a.m.-8 p.m. If the tows operate, they will run from 10 a.m.-4 p.m., he said.

Work on the skating rink, he said, is in progress, but there definitely will be no skating this weekend.
