Tax Stand Taken By W. F. George

WASHINGTON (UP) — Two key Democrats on the tax - writing House Ways & Means Committee said today that it's too early yet to tell whether there can be a net reduction in taxes next year.

They declined to join Sen. Walter F. George (D-Ga) in painting a rosy outlook on chances of tax relief next year. George said Monday he believed the treasury could stand a tax cut of three billion dollars to $3,500,000,000 in the fiscal year starting next July 1.

Rep. Hale Boggs (D-Ga) said he agreed with the stand taken by Rep. Wilbur Mills (D-Ark) that Congress should put off until spring a final decision on a cut in taxes.

The White House also refused to speculate on tax reduction, although President Eisenhower and Republican congressional leaders were told Monday the outlook is hopeful for balancing the budget in the current fiscal year without cutting military spending.

Boggs is a vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee as well as a member of the House Ways & Means Committee. Mills is chairman of a joint congressional economic subcommittee studying tax policy and is second-ranking Democrat on the Ways & Means Committee, which initiates all tax legislation.

George has long had a major voice in tax matters as a member of the Senate Finance Committee which considers tax bills after they are approved by the House.

Earlier this year, George joined in helping the administration kill in the Senate a $20-per-person income tax cut which Mills and Boggs and other Democrats pushed through the House. But Monday George said he thought the budget finally could be brought into balance by June and that income taxes could be lowered without putting the government back into the red.

George said he favored using the first $2,500,000,000 of any tax cut to increase personal income tax exemptions from the present $600 to $700. If additional tax relief is possible, he said, he favored reducing rates for middle income brackets.

German Xmas Altered By GIs

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) — The American GI is changing some of the centuries-old Christmas traditions in Germany.

Santa Claus arrives in an Army jeep or helicopter. And, with a GI playing the role of Santa, he may bring along such presents as a cowboy suit or a coonskin cap.

Since the end of World War II, American servicemen have opened their mess halls and recreation rooms to German orphans and underprivileged children for Christmas parties. Some American units also play host to refugees from the East. Military police units collect and repair toys to give German youngsters.

In turn, many German families invite American servicemen to spend the holiday with them.

In West Germany, currently enjoying a boom, everyone expects this Christmas will be the best in many years.

Sentimentally, Christmas is the year's No. 1 event for German-speaking peoples. Many of the yuletide customs were originated by their ancestors. Reputedly, it was in Germany that the idea of a Christmas tree started.

As for the German younger generation, Santa Claus makes two visits. The first is Dec. 6, known as St. Nikolaus Day. On that occasion, children place their shoes outside their doors and St. Nikolaus fills them with candies, cakes and fruits. Sometimes, if a child has been bad, Santa also leaves a small whip—a warning to the youngster to mend his ways.

The second visit, on Christmas Eve, is the time for children to receive toys and other presents from Father Christmas (Weihnachtsmann) or the Christ Child (Christkind). As elsewhere, adults exchange presents too.

Germans observe Christmas Day much as they always have. They go to church, open their presents and have a big family dinner. Sometimes it is the only family reunion of the whole year.

Kefauver May Tell 1956 Plan

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn) plans a news conference in Washington Friday. It will come as no surprise should he announce then that he seeks the Democratic presidential nomination.

The senator, taking off today on a three-city Southern California visit, has been saying publicly that he would announce his decision later this month or early in January, also that "if I run for anything it will be president, not vice president."

But yesterday the Chattanooga Times said Kefauver was reported to have made a "firm decision" to enter the presidential race and announce it in Washington Friday. Kefauver said in San Francisco that he could not confirm the report.

Later, in Los Angeles, his press secretary Charles Aldrich remarked that "the Chattanooga Times is a reliable newspaper" and said the senator will hold a news conference in Washington Friday.

Kiddies Grow Up

Geo. N. Taylor

You married and kiddies came. As they grew up, you had Bible and prayer. You found that kiddies like best, the parts of the Bible that give action. Do you kneel by the kitchen stove for prayer? The littlest ones stumble and stagger at first but later they will surprise you. In years to come when the going is rough your folks will have the faith to smile through their tears. For faith comes from the Bible. See Romans 10:17.

Geo. N. Taylor

A boy of school age was so injured that he died. His people were of Bible stock and long before his death the boy had taken Christ into his heart as the Saviour who died for his sins. Now watch that mother. She knows that there will be a glad family reunion "over there." And what for you and yours? Let them have in their heart, Christ as Lord and Saviour and eternal life is theirs. And yours also when you believe.
