

Hollywood Film Stars Go All Out On Xmas Decorating

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Hollywood Writer

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Christmas in Hollywood is snowless under the sunshine, but the film stars made up for it this year with the fanciest yuletide decorations in history.

Libera's neighbors are used to his amazing house with its backyard fence decorated with musical notes. But they were startled to see a huge lighted Santa playing a piano by that same candelabra atop his roof. Next to Santa are reindeer and huge glittering stars.

Piano music—Libera's is, of course—is spread around the neighborhood from loudspeakers.

"Well, I'm the mayor of Sherman Oaks and I sorta felt I wanted to have some different decorations," smiles the pianist.

The Libera touch also includes a rhinestone-studded tree. This glittering sight, sprinkles with artificial snowflakes and jeweled ornaments that would make St. Nick drop his beard at the North Pole.

stands by Libera's piano-shaped swimming pool.

Another white tree in the Libera living room is decorated with conventional ornaments, and a third tree on the lawn is brightly lit.

Richard Boone, star of TV's "Medic," is a close runner-up in the unusual-tree division. He draped his with bandages, balls of cotton, scissors and stethoscopes to match the doctor character he plays on the show.

For years Lou Costello's decorations outside his Sherman Oaks home were the world's most elaborate. Lou sold his home this year. But tourists wrote they were driving to California to inspect the display. So he put most of it up at the home of his sister, Myra Kirk, a block away. His display includes a huge Santa climbing down a chimney that spouts bubbles.

Danny Thomas' home in Beverly Hills is another favorite of the crowds who drive around to look at the decorated homes these nights. On his lawn is a Nativity scene featuring 11 two-foot-tall ceramic figures of Biblical characters imported from Palestine. Christmas carols are heard from a loudspeaker.

Spike Jones installed a Santa, sleigh and reindeer on his roof. Singer Frankie Laine hung twinkling trees on a tree on his front lawn and outlined the house in colored lights.

Many movieowners pick Christmas scenery to match the land of sunlasses and swimming pools. Richard Conte used a huge piece of beach driftwood for his tree. Jean Simmons and Stewart Granger had old-fashioned green trees in England. But this year they put their ornaments on a big cactus outside the Palms Springs desert home where they are spending the holidays. Jean Hagen and the Robert Taylors are among stars who hung Mexican Christmas pinatas—huge crepe paper animals and birds—from the ceiling.

Loretta Young's white tree features antique German ornaments she had collected since she was a child. But starlet Kathleen Hughes claims she has the most unusual yuletide decor in town—an old-fashioned green tree to match her old-fashioned black telephone.

TYPHOON RUTH
TOKYO (AP)—Typhoon Ruth, a giant Pacific storm 600 miles across and packing central winds of 150-mile-an-hour force, was churning northeast today on a course that might smash battered Iwo Jima with its tiny U. S. Air Force garrison.

Cruiser Club Elects Officers
The Cruiser Club of the Mt. Lak Church has elected new officers. The election followed the December chicken dinner, a program which included the showing of colored slides of Hawaii by Earl Mack Jr., and the singing of Christmas carols. The Rev. Charles Myers, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church, Klamath Falls, a guest, led the closing devotions. New officers include: Skippers, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. McBride; First Mate, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Manning; Logkeepers, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Ellison; Purser, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sharp; and Lookouts, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Mack Jr.

Kebbe Describes Traits Of Famed, Playful Otter

(Editor's Note: This is the last of three articles on Oregon's fur-bearing animals and trapping industry.)

By GORMAN HOGAN
PORTLAND (AP)—Though Oregon has few full time trappers, one who knows his business can make quite a little stake in the winter months.

Chester E. Kebbe, chief biologist in charge of fur resources for the State Game Commission, says trappers have told him they've made as much as $2,400 in a three-month period. Trapping isn't a year-round business, since most furs are prime only in the winter time.

The trapper, Kebbe says, is a singular fellow who likes the outdoors and is impelled by an everlasting challenge to match wits and cunning with members of the wild animal world.

One of these is the otter, a real clown who takes a great delight in life.

The otter plays tag and follow the leader, sliding down mud or snow-covered slopes into the water.

These playful traits make the otter a disgusting pest to the hard working beaver, which might well be envious, too, since the otter has one of the best and most durable natural furs.

It is used principally for stoles and scarves.

The raccoon, a friendly nocturnal wanderer, can be something of a pest because of his propensity for raids on chicken houses and forays into corn patches.

The animal, distinguished by his black mask and ringed bushy tail, is well known for his habit of washing or dunking food before he eats it. He'll eat almost anything.

Incidentally, the Eastern Oregon subspecies is the largest variety in the United States.

The fisher and ring-tailed cat on which the season is closed, are furbearers rarely seen in Oregon. Pelts from the fisher, which bears some resemblance to the weasel, are among the most valuable, bringing up to $100 apiece.

Found only in parts of Southern Oregon, the little ring-tailed cat is a cousin of the raccoon with the raccoon's tail markings. His diet is similar to the raccoon's and in the past many have been tamed by miners to catch mice around cabins.

Pelts of other furbearers such as the coyote, bear and skunk have little value and are not covered by the state game code. However, a license is required to hunt them.

Marten fur, often called American sable, ranges in color from light yellowish in Eastern Oregon to dark brown in Western Oregon.

Down in the southeast region two buck deer were checked by game commission personnel during the season that were already in the process of shedding their antlers.

In one case, one antler fell off when the buck was shot, and the other came off when the deer was loaded into a pickup truck.

The antlers of the second buck checked were loose from the skull at the time of the kill, being held to the skull only by the surrounding skin. Extreme care was used in loading this animal to keep from knocking the antlers completely loose from the head.

One more big buck was reported taken during the hunter's choice season that had no antler growth at all. In all probability he had been passed up many times by hunters during the buck season.

These are the earliest authentic reports of Oregon deer shedding their antlers. Normally, antlers are not shed until February and into March.

Yet, it looks like our buck deer have found one more method of outsmarting the hunter.

They conceded the increase has meant that some 950,000 veterans have committed themselves to pay as much as $51 million dollars more in increased interest costs than if the rate had been 4 per cent. But they said that without it few loans — or houses — would have been available to veterans. End advance for Pms Dec. 16

DEWEY CONFERS WITH FRIENDS
NEW YORK (AP)—Former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey met last night with seven state Republican leaders. He insisted, however, that he has no political aspirations and a spokesman for the party leaders said the meeting was "strictly social."

"There is no news tonight. I have nothing today," Dewey told newsmen.

William MacKenzie of Belmont, N. Y., chairman of the State Assembly Ways and Means Committee, said of Dewey, "In my book he can have any political job he aspires to."

"I don't want any, now or any time," Dewey, twice Republican presidential candidate, replied, "I am completely happy."

Dewey is practicing law here. The meeting with state Republican leaders yesterday was Dewey's first since he left office as governor after three terms.
