Tourist Family Remains In California After Visit

By PETER HAYES
United Press Staff Correspondent

SAN FRANCISCO (UP) —Harold Cunningham of Gary, Ind., brought his wife and three children to California on a vacation in 1952. They're still here.

The Cunninghams never went back to Gary—that is, they went back only long enough to pack up. They moved to Fontana, Calif., where Cunningham, who had worked almost 17 years at the U.S. Steel plant at Gary, now has a job as a shear man on the tin-plate line at the Kaiser Steel mill.

"I saw how really nice it was out here and how the cost of living was cheaper," Cunningham says.

The Cunninghams are among a horde of mid-century migrants following the setting sun to California, Arizona and Nevada. They come at the rate of almost a thousand a day. Every year the migration is equal, in numbers to the population of a city the size of Atlanta, Ga., or Rochester, N.Y.

Charles Nechanicky left Chicago in 1950 and went to work for Lockheed Aircraft Co. in Burbank, Calif. "I thought it was a more healthful climate," he said. "And I love it here."

Elizabeth Monts, home economics instructor at Fresno State College, satisfied a five-year ambition this year when she came west from Illinois.

"The climate is milder and I have found people very friendly out here," said Miss Monts.

Edward J. Conroy transferred to San Francisco from Connecticut when his company gave him his choice between here and Chicago. His wife was all for it. "Back East," she said, "everyone thinks of California as being very romantic and glamorous and we were glad to come."

People like the Conroys have helped swell the westward movement to more than 330,000 migrants a year since 1950. Population figures tell the story.

In 1950 California's population was 10,586,000. Today it is 13,035,000, an increase of 23.1 per cent.

Even more spectacular are the rates of increase in Nevada and Arizona. In the five years since 1950 Nevada climbed from 160,000 to 210,000, or a 31 per cent increase, and Arizona increased from 750,000 to 928,000 or 23.8 per cent.

Well over half of these increases are due to arrival of newcomers from other states. The remainder is the normal gain resulting from the birth rate exceeding the death rate.

United Press asked half a dozen sociologists and population experts why so many people are following Horace Greeley's famous advice to young men.

Boiled down, they said, it's a matter of job opportunity combined with good living conditions such as mild climate and lots of breathing space.

Dr. William A. Spurr of Stanford University pointed out that the big migration doesn't mean there have been more jobs available in the west. The newcomers indirectly bring their jobs with them. Their arrival expands the market. This increases production and results in new jobs, he said.

Spurr predicted that by 1965 California's population would surpass that of New York and be greatest in the nation. Already, however, city, county and state officials are being harassed by the problems of a ballooning population.

At the present rate of growth, a county that has 250,000 to 500,000 residents now can expect to have 90,000 more 10 years hence. This means it must accommodate 32,000 new homes on 1000 new residential blocks, must provide 650,000 more gallons of water and 75 million more kilowatts of electricity.

The county will have 15,000 new children and will need 428 new classrooms or 28 elementary schools. Another 30,000 automobiles will jam the county's roads.

Home Extension

LINDLEY HEIGHTS

By Mrs. Gordon Loomis

"Making Cakes Attractive" was the project given at the Lindley Heights Home Extension meeting Wednesday, December 14 at Joan's Kitchen. The project leaders, Opal Parisotto and Peggy Cochrane, demonstrated ways of frosting a cake and simple ways of decorating cakes for different occasions, including the technique of making frosting flowers.

Following a short business meeting, there was a Christmas gift exchange and entertainment. Mrs. Corda Everhart showed slides taken on her recent trip to Alaska. Mrs. Kathryn Billings and Mrs. Maggie Sample decorated the tree and room.

The next meeting will be January 10, 1956, at Joan's Kitchen. The topic will be "Care of the Hair."

LANGELL VALLEY

By Mrs. Robert Seater

The December meeting of the Langell Valley Home Extension Unit was held at the home of Mrs. Mike Dearborn on Wednesday, December 7.

After a short business meeting, Hope Holbrook, county home extension agent, presented the project "Picture Selection and Framing." She showed a number of reproductions and asked for discussion on them. She explained what to look for when selecting pictures for the home.

A delicious luncheon was served at noon to eight members and one guest, after which a gift exchange was held.

In the afternoon, Miss Holbrook displayed many different types of frames which can be constructed inexpensively at home.

The next meeting, which will be on "Care of the Hair," will be held at the home of Mrs. Robert Seater on January 4.

COLD WAVES

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Record cold waves in the East and Midwest don't mean much out here, except for the gloating newspaper headlines they produce.

It was 78 in Phoenix yesterday, one degree less than the record high for the day set in 1917. Almost everybody went around in shirtsleeves.

KENO

By Mrs. Joe DeGrande

The regular PTA meeting was called to order December 13, at 7:30 p.m. by president, Lee Shellhorn. Mrs. Monniette Zarosinski read the minutes of the previous meeting. Mrs. Marion Crosslin read the treasurer report.

Stanley Sevruk's room won the room-count which entitles him to keep the parakeet until the next meeting. The business meeting was adjourned.

Community singing was led by Mrs. Helen Montgomery and the Rev. Dwayne Proett played the piano. The Rev. Proett, pastor of Peace Memorial Church in Klamath Falls, gave a talk on the need for teaching a child to observe holidays more meaningfully.

Care of children accompanied by their parents was under the supervision of Mrs. Margret Thurman. Mrs. Elmer Erlei will be in charge of the next meeting.

Estimate Given On Future Oregon Irrigation Plans

SALEM (AP) — Oregon, which now has 1,374,707 acres of irrigated land, will bring water to 1,459,170 more acres in the next 50 years, the Oregon Agricultural Experiment Station estimates.

The station made this estimate after a comprehensive land and water survey.

It said there are 5,325,000 acres of cropland that could be classed as irrigable, plus 25 million acres of range and pasture lands.

There isn't enough water available for all of that land, and it wouldn't pay to irrigate a lot of it.

The estimate that the amount of irrigated land will be doubled in the next half century is based on assumptions that present sources of water will remain available, that state and federal water policies won't change, and that the demand for food will shove farm prices high enough to make irrigation profitable.

The Willamette Valley, which now has 80,195 acres of irrigated land, is due for the biggest expansion of any region. The station estimated that 702,800 more acres in the valley will be irrigated in the next 50 years.

Present totals for other regions, with the estimated amounts to be added in the 50-year-period, are:

Coastal counties, 10,050 and 39,420; Columbia Basin, 93,842 and 337,750; Blue Mountains, 260,003 and 143,750; South Central Area, 854,959 and 168,920; and Southern Oregon, 75,658 and 66,530.

"Preliminary calculations," the report says, "indicated there is enough water in sight to meet the requirements of the estimated irrigable land by areas as well as the total water need for the state.

"Considerable development through storage and other means will be needed, however, if this water is available for irrigated agriculture."

Plane Misuse Hit By ANG

WASHINGTON (UP) — Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson said today that in three years as Air National Guard chief he has found no "gross misuse" of Guard planes by junketeering governors.

There have been repeated charges that governors use the government owned planes for personal pleasure, he said. But in each case such charges have proved to be "completely false" upon investigation.

The use of Guard planes by governors has drawn attention recently as a result of flights made by Alabama Gov. James E. Folsom. Folsom threatened to make what he termed a reconnaissance and inspection flight to Jacksonville, Fla., in a Guard plane Jan. 1, the day Auburn is to play in the 'Gator Bowl.

Folsom already is under investigation by the Air Force inspector general on charges that he has been using National Guard planes for other than official use. The report on the investigation is not expected until next month.
