

HOLIDAYS AT HOME is a date for Mr. and Mrs. W. Don (Dee) Miller, whose marriage in October was a surprise to their host of friends. The new Mrs. Miller was Ellen Sullivan before vows were said October 21 in Virginia City.

The marriage merged two well-known Basin families — she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan O'Keeffe, 335 Pacific Terrace; and Don is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Miller, 640 Conger Avenue.

The bride is continuing with her work in the music department of the city schools — and her husband is associated with his father in the Miller Construction Company. They are at home, 526 Eldorado. — Photo by Otto Ellis

THE FIRST KLAMATH FALLS CHRISTMAS for Carl Runge and his family, will be at their home, 1006 Laurel. They have been here since last summer, when they moved to Oregon from Evanston, Illinois.

With Mrs. Runge are the two younger sons, Steve, a second grader at Riverside; and Dennie, a sophomore at KUHS, who plays in the band and on the sophomore basketball team.

At the right, Carl Runge, with their only daughter, Susan, who is in the sixth grade at Roosevelt—and a member of Girl Scout Troop 40; and their oldest son, Mike. He is a senior at KUHS and plays basketball. Carl Runge, new manager of the new South Sixth Street Oregon Food Store and Bon Bazaar, said that he and Mrs. Runge intend to make Klamath Falls their permanent home.

Their house on Laurel is near the top of Lindley Heights—and last fall they often walked out on hill-proper to look down on the fascinating after-dark panorama of city and suburban lights as they twinkled into the picture.

For a very new family they have entered the town's daytime picture with enthusiasm. They find this country much more spectacular than the terrain they left—and along with noting that the air here is much drier—they especially noted that the people are so much more friendly. Church bells will out-ring jingle bells today
... It's Christmas — when The Story of Jesus will be retold throughout the world from countless pulpits and choir voices in concerted song will once again proclaim
"... and on Earth
Peace, Good Will Toward Men."

A COMPLETE CHANGE from the traditional Christmas tree with heirloom ornaments is the tree of yards and yards of nylon lace manipulated into the stylized tree in the living room of the Charles Schuss residence, 230 Washington Street. In the picture, Mrs. Schuss gives a final touch to one of the lights—which ornamented her all white lacy creation. (Tradition still holds forth in the household—an old fashioned tree with all the old trimmings stands in daughter Donna Lee's room.) —Photo by Milly Ramsby

"CHRISTMAS" IS A FAMILY PRODUCTION at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Richard L. Currin, 1940 Lawrence. This is the first year that Cherry, 2, has caught the meaning of the festive decorating preliminaries to Christmas Day. As the season progressed she built up more and more enthusiasm and the family enterprise centered around the little one's excitement.

From the left, Mrs. Currin, oldest daughter, Leslie, 9; Cynthia, 5, in front; Dr. Currin, oldest son, Charlton, 12; and Ricky, 11, holding Cherry.

Dr. Currin is scout master of Troop 3, to which both of his sons belong. Mrs. Currin was a den mother for Cub Scouts for three years—and their home is a weekly meeting place for Ricky's patrol—and also frequent Troop No. 3 executive meetings with Dr. Currin. —Photo by Milly Ramsby
