Western States Exchange Students' Expenses Listed

The state of Oregon, which has no school of veterinary medicine, is spending $16,800 this year to send 11 Oregon boys who want to be veterinarians to the Colorado A & M School of Veterinary Medicine and the State College of Washington School of Veterinary Medicine to receive their training. At the same time, Oregon's medical and dental schools are receiving $18,000 from four other western states, which are sending 11 students to Oregon for training the four states can't provide within their own borders.

The figures on the exchange of students among western states were announced today by Frank J. Van Dyke of Medford, Oregon, Executive Committee member of the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education.

Mr. Van Dyke said, "By sending its veterinary students to other states Oregon saves the substantial cost of building, staffing, and operating its own veterinary school. At the same time, it fulfills its obligation to provide high quality professional training for Oregon students at the lowest possible cost."

Oregon also benefits from the students from other western states who use its professional schools. The money these states pay for the training contributes to the financial well-being of both the Dental School, which has 10 of the students, and the Medical School, which now has one but which expects increased out-of-state attendance because of its new teaching hospital.

"The exchange of students among western states is being carried out with the help of the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education in Boulder, Colorado."

"In all, the commission has 137 students from seven states studying in the professional schools of other western states. Ten western states and the Territory of Alaska have pooled their educational resources under the commission to make the exchange possible."

"Each out-of-state student, studying under the commission's program, pays the same fee as residents of the receiving state. But his state makes a supplemental payment of $2,000 for each medical student and $1,000 for each dental student."

Oregon students studying under the exchange program this year are at Colorado A & M School of Veterinary Medicine: Stanley Blinkhorn, Portland; Thomas A. Hawn, Eugene; James E. Hoffman, Milwaukee; Delbert Holloway, Jun-tura; Pierre J. Jones, Rainier; Robert J. Leuke, Forest Grove;

Frank L. Lieullen, Island City; Richard Parsley, Central Point; Boyd Stock, Salem; Raymond D. Stoter, Coburg; Robert F. Wilcox, Medford.

ROTC Duty Course Told

More than half of the Reserve Officer Training Corps graduates coming to active duty during the next six months will be released to the Ready Reserve after training, the Army has decided, according to word received by the Oregon Military District.

There are 4,100 ROTC graduates scheduled to report for basic branch training between January 1 and June 30. Those on orders to report during January and February will have their orders amended unless they volunteer or are selected for a two-year tour. Others, due to report later, will receive orders to report for six months active duty for training unless accepted for the longer period.

The result is that about 2,300 men will be available to Ready Reserve units for assignment as platoon leaders or similar jobs during the last six months of 1956. These men will complete an eight year obligation in the Army Reserve.

Accordingly, it is often an advantage to young men who plan to take ROTC to enlist in the Army Reserve while still in high school and by participation gain valuable leadership training and army experience. Additionally, there is the added incentive in the Army's longevity pay program, whereby a man's pay in his grade is increased based on years of military service. In computing this pay increase, Reserve, as well as active duty service is counted.

Men interested in affiliating with the Army Reserve as prior training for ROTC courses should see Sfc. H. C. Collier at the Klamath Falls Army Reserve Center, 432 Main Street.
