

GORDON HICKS, 925 California Avenue, was enjoying the sledding on Conger Hill Saturday when Herald and News photographer Otto Ellis took this picture. The city recreation department provides a sled tow on the hill for the sledders of the city to use.

"LOOKING AT THE WORLD through rose colored glasses" used to be a pastime limited to incurable optimists. But today any girl who wears glasses can enjoy a roseate view, regardless of whether her glasses are framed in red, blue, green, brown, black or even plain.

A DRAMATIC SWEEP of wave inspires breathtaking loveliness for evening glamour and romantic flair for daytime smartness in this Swan Wing Swirlwave coiffure by the official hair fashion committee of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association. This coiffure conveys that intangible but unmistakable touch of good grooming with feminine flair.

Pretty Glasses

There is an increasing number of girls who wear glasses, part or all of the time.

"Glasses today are fashion accessories, and it's important for a woman to find the glasses shape that flatters her features." Carol Douglas, beauty consultant for The Toni Company, says. Since beautifying the American woman is Miss Douglas' business, she has some definite ideas about glasses and makeup and hairstyles to go with them.

According to Miss Douglas, if you have an oval or heart shaped face you should wear frames with oval lenses. Harlequins are best for square and round faces, while triangular and diamond-shaped faces look best with frames that are straight on top and oval or slightly squared on the bottom.

"In other words, glasses frames, like hairstyles, should give the illusion of width or slenderness where each is needed," Miss Douglas says. But she warns against the "hiding behind your glasses" look which results when a girl with petite features wears large, thick-rimmed glasses. Just as unbecoming, she believes, is the "two sizes too small" look, when a woman with large features selects small glasses in delicate frames. Lenses should be large enough to include the entire eye, and frames should be equal to or wider than the face at the cheekbone.

Makeup can help integrate glasses with facial features if it is used properly. For example, use lipstick, preferably a vivid shade, to make the lips important enough to balance the glasses. Apply rouge to follow the upturned lines of your glasses (but don't let the color extend under the lenses); curl and brush eyelashes with mascara, and use just a touch of shadow on your lids.

"A flattering hairstyle is important for every woman," Miss Douglas adds, "but it is essential for the woman who wears glasses. Her glasses draw attention to her face . . . so her hairstyle must be perfect."

The ideal hairstyle for girls who wear glasses features the deep waves and soft curls so popular today . . . with no straggly ends or curl-resisting strands.

"To keep her hair in the best condition, a girl needs a simple beauty routine and follows it rigidly: Daily brushing, frequent shampooing, creme rinsing, and periodic home permanents," Miss Douglas says.

By following this advice, a girl can look at the world through the proverbial "rose colored glasses" no matter what shade her frames may be.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — When Charles Edward Walker, 22, admitted in Quarterly Court he was racing another car at high speed, charges of reckless driving were set aside immediately. He told Judge J. E. Hutchins he was trying to outspeed another driver who appeared to be spoiling for a fight. "I might have done the same thing," Judge Hutchins said.
