

Russians Expected To Win Honors At Winter Olympics

CORTINA D'AMPEZZO, Italy (AP) — The Russians have a reputation for not entering international sports competition unless they think they can win. And next week's Winter Olympics, Russia's first, apparently are no exception. With six days remaining before the 1956 games get under way in this Alpine village, even conservative appraisals of Russian strength concede the Soviets six gold medals.

That's more than some nations have been able to collect since the winter games were inaugurated in 1924. From what they've seen of the Russians in warm-up competition, particularly speed skating and ski jumping, experienced observers figure the Big Four among the Olympic nations — Norway, the United States, Sweden and Finland — will have to make room for one more.

Since 1924, Norway has dominated the winter games, winning 30½ gold medals. The United States follows with 17. Then come Sweden, with 13, and Finland with 12½.

Skating and skiing are the toughest of the Olympic events to predict. And picking winners from among Russia's team members is just as tricky since the Soviets seem capable of producing champions out of nowhere.

Still, Russia probably can expect two gold medals — team and individual — in the men's cross country and two more in the women's cross country.

Little Vladimir Kuzin leads Russia's men in the cross country. His toughest competition should come from Finland's Veikko Hakulinen and Arto Tiainen and Sweden's Sixten Jernberg, the only man to beat Kuzin in more than a year.

Another one or two — probably two — gold medals seem headed for Russia in the speed skating.

Sweden's Sligge Ericsson, the lean distance man who upset the Russians for the individual world title in Moscow last February, is favored in the 10,000 meters, but not in the 5,000 or 1,500-meter races. The Russians are strong in each, with world records in both. Ken Henry of Chicago, who won one of the United States' four gold medals in the 1952 games at Oslo by taking the 500 meters, has only a fair chance of repeating.

In practice jumps on Italia, the graceful hill which will be the site of the Olympic event, Russia's Kobe Tsakadze has been surprisingly good. He has experience in international competition, and at the very least should push the ace Finns and Norwegians to their best.

Norway has claimed every jumping gold medal since the event was opened in the Olympics and is led by the 1952 champion, Asbjorn Osnes.

Russia's Alpine skiers form a "mystery" team. Little is known about their potentials, except that they've looked better than expected in several pre-Olympic meets in Switzerland and Austria.

The Russian girls are expected to pick up at least one Alpine title, probably in the downhill event. And the Russian men wouldn't really surprise anyone if they scored a first.

Klamath Wins SOC Mat Meet

Coach Dutch Simons' Klamath Union High School wrestling squad chalked up victory number one in Southern Oregon Conference action Thursday afternoon on Pelican Court as they manhandled the Medford Black Tornado mat squad 47-10.

The Pelican junior varsity club also turned back Medford by a 49-19 decision to make the day's work a clean sweep for the Klamath grapplers.

Klamath jumped off to a quick 28-0 lead over their visitors from the Pelican Court on falls by Larry Bender, Gary Cramer, Jim Brown, Gary Roberts and Gary Price, and a three-point decision by Pete Barnhisel. Brown's fall was the feature attraction of the afternoon meet as he pinned Medford's Sam Jennings in a rapid-fire order of 17 seconds into the first round.

Bill Steiner added to the Klamath point total with a decision before Medford was able to crack the ice. With Klamath leading 31-0, Medford's Ray Hilton scored a fall over the Pelican's Bernard Hardman for five points.

Dave Leeling and Roy Ropp registered decisions before Medford was able to draw blood again. Mel Morgan pinned Darryl Peterson of Klamath to give the Tornados their final counters of the day. C. B. Helfand Now Strides For Nation Sweep

NEW YORK (UP)—Julius Helfand, apparently victorious in New York State, was openly crusading for a nation-wide clean-up of the fight game today by demanding that the National Boxing Association's executive committee end its "sheer hypocrisy."

Chairman Helfand's New York State Athletic Commission is not a member of the NBA; but he challenged its executive committee to repeal last Saturday's Chicago recommending resolution that would permit fighters to sign their own contracts for bouts even though their managers had been suspended or unlicensed in other states.

Helfand delivered his blistering challenge at Thursday night's annual dinner of the Boxing Writers Assn., on the same date with Lou Radzinski of Chicago, president of the NBA.

"I'm not a member of the NBA," Helfand declared, "but I'm a member of the public. I'm a member of the public who has been misled by the NBA's own resolutions that would have supported the N.Y. state ban against the N.Y. Boxing Guild and would have 'provided the happiest day in boxing history.'"

One resolution recommended that NBA states require a promoter matchmaker, manager, boxer trainer or second to be licensed in his home state before obtaining a license in another.

Brooklyn Seeking To Cut Robinson's Pact

By MILTON RICHMAN
United Press Sports Writer

The Brooklyn Dodgers are trying to get Jackie Robinson to hold still for a $7,000 salary slice, but if they are unsuccessful, the Chicago White Sox, among other clubs have indicated they'll be glad to take him off their hands.

Robinson huddled an hour with Brooklyn Vice-President Buzzy Bavasi Thursday but failed to come to terms. The Dodgers then said that they and the 36-year old Robby "are not too far apart."

But that's the same thing they said two weeks ago.

There have been repeated questions as to whether Robinson would play ball again this year and to all those questions he has replied, "That depends on the contract I get." He received an estimated $40,000 last year.

Brooklyn, well fixed at third base with Ransom Jackson, who was obtained from the Cubs, and also loaded with seven left field candidates, is not exactly in dire need of Robinson, despite his .314 lifetime batting average.

NO WAIVERS
An official of the White Sox has admitted they tried to get Robinson late last year but Brooklyn could not get him out of the National League on waivers. Cincinnati and Pittsburgh reportedly also are interested in Robinson even though the 256 average he compiled last season was his worst in the majors.

Robinson is anxious to get in his 10th year in the big leagues and the Dodgers claim they are eager to have him with them. The veteran infielder-outfielder concedes he'll take a cut, but he insists "not too big a one."

Elsewhere around the major league orbit, the Cubs announced they now have a total of 28 players under contract with the signing of first baseman Frank Keller, right handed pitcher Bill Tremel and rookie shortstop Ritchie Myers.

TOTAL
Catchers Sherman Lollar and Carl Sawatski, utility outfielder Ron Northey and pitcher Bill Fischer signed with the White Sox giving them a total of 18 players under contract.

Hank Bauer, the Yankee club felder who turned down his first contract, accepted a raise Thursday that brought him into the $25,000 category. Bauer batted .278 in 139 games last season, driving in 53 runs and hitting 20 homers.

Pitchers Glenn Cox and Gus Keriazakos and infielder Gerry Schypinski signed with Kansas City.

Neighborhood Quarrels Set Stage For ND

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A pair of neighborhood quarrels matching teams from the old Northern Division will hold the Pacific Coast Conference basketball spotlight this weekend.

Washington takes on its old cross state rival, Washington State, and Oregon travels to Moscow for games with Idaho.

Oregon State, another ex-Northern Division team, also will be in action as host to Stanford, the only California team slated for PCC duty this weekend. The Indians journey to Corvallis for games Friday night and Saturday. The Saturday contest will be the NCAA's televised "Game of the Week."

Washington and Oregon hope to gain on front-running UCLA.

Both teams have 1-1 conference records and sweeps would put them within reach of the Bruins, who have won four league games without a defeat.

Oregon State will face tougher competition in the Stanford Indians. The Indians won three of their four conference games and are tied in second place with California, while the Beavers have a 1-3 record.

Colorful Ring Figure Recalls Days Of Past

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—Harry Mendel, a little fat man "without an enemy in the world," had a catch in his voice as he looked back on nearly a half century of sports.

Clutched proudly against his ample bosom was the plaque given him by the Boxing Writers Assn. Peeping over his pudgy fingers were the words: "For long and meritorious service to boxing."

"My dad told me a long time ago that you could pick up gold in the gutters of this country only people were too lazy to bend down," he smiled. "This is better than hitting an eight-horse parlay."

Mendel, at 62, is a boxing publicist who has been on the sports scene since before the song "When You and I Were Young, Maggie" left the hit parade. He antedates the championship days of Jack Dempsey, and that's a lot of antedating.

"You wouldn't think to look at me," he grinned, jabbing a thumb against the 160 pounds on his five foot, two inch frame, "that I used to be able to chin myself 30 times. Now I can't hardly lift myself out of bed."

GAGS
But the humble brain which sur-

mounts that bulky edifice is as good as ever. It still comes up with the publicity gags which help building boxing box office. Sometimes it even contributes to the fire inside the ring. Like in the case of Tony Galento when old "Two Ton" fought Joe Louis.

It was Mendel who suggested to Galento his famous line "I'll murder the bum." After the bout, Galento needed 38 stitches. Mendel asked Joe why he cut up Tony so badly.

"It was gonna let it go 15 rounds just so I could give him something to remember me by for calling me a bum," Joe growled. Mendel kept quiet.

Harry, who abandoned an office boy's job with an iron company to become a newspaperman, as his first boxing assignment covered the Dempsey-Fred Fulton bout at Harrison, N.J., in 1918. It lasted 18 seconds. His blow-by-blow account was:

GREATEST
Mendel saw Dempsey come on to win the title and has seen them all since then, even through the days when he was a six day bike race promoter. And he lists Louis as the "greatest heavyweight I've ever seen although Benny Leonard was the best all-around fighter."

"The meanest fighter, a kid there's no close second," he insists, "was Galento. He'd butt a man just for the fun of it."

In recent years, Mendel has been a tub thumper at training camps for the International Boxing Club. He handled Roland LaStarza's camp for the bout with Rocky Marciano and enjoyed spending the IBC's money to take visitors to a night club known as the Riviera. When he turned in his expense account, the cashier exploded:

"Are you sure you didn't take these guys to the Riviera in France?"
A fast man, with greenbacks or gimmicks. But for the first time in his life, the award had him almost speechless.
