Yogi Grows From Clown To Third Highest Paid Yankee

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

MIAMI—(NEA)—It was, you say to yourself, only last fall that Bucky Harris was standing, as the Yankee manager, at Ebbets Field before the World Series started. He was going to start a kid catcher, Yogi Berra, and somebody asked him about it. "Is Berra smart enough to catch in a World Series?" the guy said. "Yes," he nodded. "Doesn't look it, does he?"

Now at this time, Berra, the comic book reader, was catching for three Yankee hurlers—Vic Raschi, a college degree-holder; Ed Lopat, regarded as the smartest around; and Allie Reynolds, an oil man, and the players' leader.

For the stumpy, comical guy who came from The Hill in St. Louis, this seems incongruous. Branch Rickey, for example, chased him away from the Cardinals. Get into something else, Rickey advised.

OLD COACH
John Schulte, the old coach who was Joe McCarthy's right hand man with the Yankees, though otherwise he took Mr. Berra by the hand and made the Yankees sign him. The price? A little loose change, at most.

This for a catcher who bats over 300, knocks in over 100 runs and, in spots like the World Series of 1953, does things you can't believe. That would be, of course, the two straight bunts the Dodgers tried with runners on first and second and a big inning brewing. On both plays, it was Berra who scrambled out to whisk the ball off the grass and on a line toward third. The runners, Gil Hodges and Carl Furillo, were out on two classic catching plays.

In the seventh game last fall, you still think of Berra, swinging with a purpose on Johnny Podres. It was to louse up the Brooklyn defense and drop a hit into left field. Yogi's old-pro was a foot shy. That was the series-saver catch Sandy Amoros made.

Today, Yogi Berra, the guy you laughed at, stands behind only Babe Ruth and Joe DiMaggio as the highest paid players in New York Yankee history. Pretty fast company. But that's what Yogi is built for.

Paul Richards, for example, said, "He wants to make you think he's a country bumpkin. He loafs and looks out of whack. But when the play goes, he is a cat. He runs with any infielder around. He out-thinks you. He out-hits you. He ruins you with the bat or glove. He is the difference between the

And Berra, the comic book reader, the guy you laughed at, was calling the shots. He'd hold his hand up to stop play, then trot out to speak to Reynolds or Lopat or Raschi. And when Yogi talked, these pitchers listened.

But then came the creeping notion that Berra was more than a clown.

But he was more than a clown.

But he was more than a clown.

But he was more than a clown.

But he was more than a clown.

Yankees and three or four other clubs."

Because of this, you find it hard to regard Yogi as a big businessman now. He has a bowling alley and a chain of ice cream parlors and a lot of tax worries. You see him at the better places in town. When he plays baseball, he is what baseball writers have voted him—the league's most valuable player.

For the stumpy, comical guy who came from The Hill in St. Louis, this seems incongruous. Branch Rickey, for example, chased him away from the Cardinals. Get into something else, Rickey advised.

Baker Looks For KO To Prove Title Claim

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UP)—Bob Baker, the Pittsburgh weight lifter and heavy-weight more or less in that order—is determined today to prove that you can make a catamount out of a kitten.

Baker, ranked second in the big division, is looking for a shot at Rocky Marciano's title. He can take a giant step forward if he stows away Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson in Madison Square Garden Friday night.

But Baker admits that, finally, he will have to get "mean." This is not to infer that burly Bob intends to bite or gouge. He realizes that your great heavy-weight must have the "killer" instinct which marked the careers of the tigrish Jack Dempsey, the implacable Joe Louis and the bull-his Marciano.

"If I can't knock good with Jackson," admits the 29-year-old Baker, "then I don't deserve a chance for the title. So I'll knock him out."

Such aggressiveness is an abrupt about face for the six foot, one and one-half inch behemoth who certainly is gifted with all the mechanical and physical attributes necessary to ring greatness. He has won 13 straight bouts but in most of them the music was slow and dreamy.

A potent example was his last affair to dance in which he won a decision over Nino Valdes in a stately waltz. The 210-pound Baker pointing up his lack of murderous enthusiasm, concedes that "I was winning and didn't want to extend myself."

On sober reflection, he has one word for his performance: "Lousy." While you may find such a description offensive, if you saw their minutest you will know it is aptly applied.

Baker, a Navy veteran who worked in an iron foundry to strengthen his hands, has won 44 of 50 bouts against five losses and a draw. Indicative of the surprise attending his knockout prophecy is that over that distance he has drawn the curtains on only 19 of his opponents.

There is little likelihood, even if he mislays his intentions to commit mayhem, that he will be able to waltz with the unorthodox and unpredictable hurricane.

WINDMILL
Jackson is a bewildering "boxer" who throws an unceasing storm of punches which haven't been invented yet. He looks like nothing so much as a berserk wind mill but conditions himself so thoroughly that he can maintain an unrelenting attack.

The Hurricane twice has blown himself out against a squat, tricky jack-in-the-box named Jimmy Slade, who isn't even in the first 10. After first losing to Slade, Jackson won nine in a row with a knockout of Red Layne and decisions over Archie McBride and Edward Charles twice. Then Slade up and knocked him off again.

Slade, as a result, has developed into a complex. But against Baker the Hurricane promises to blow loud and strong. And, while boxing men shake their head over his so-called "style," Jackson totes a record of 25 wins and 11 knockouts in 39 bouts into the ring with him.

It could develop into an interesting affair. If, that is, Baker really has put away his dancing shoes and started eating raw meat.

Temple Suffers First Loss

By UNITED PRESS
And then there were two—San Francisco and St. Francis.

Those were the only major-college teams left on the unbeaten list today as mighty Temple was charged with a stunning 67-66 upset by Muhlenberg that ended the Owls' winning streak for the season at 13 games.

Temple came to grief in the hard fought game at Allentown, Pa., Wednesday night after falling 18 points behind in the early going, making it up midway in the second half, and then waging a see-saw battle for the last 10 minutes.

Temple, ranked seventh nationally by the United Press Board of Coaches, included a 13-point victory over Kentucky in its winning streak.

And so only San Francisco (15-0) and St. Francis of Brooklyn (14-0) are left alone in the unbeaten class among major colleges. St. Francis was defeated unofficially to have accepted a bid to the National Invitation Tournament, the third team picked for the 12-team field.

DIXIE RIVALS
Kentucky scored a stirring 81-76 victory over Duke at Lexington, Ky., Wednesday night in a game between two Dixie rivals both high in the national ratings. The ninth-ranked Kentucky Wildcats headed into the third period with a 20-point lead but nearly blew it. Each team now has a 1-3 record.

Dayton, the nation's No. 2 team which was knocked from the unbeaten ranks by Louisville last Saturday, returned to action and to the winning column with an easy 75-47 decision over Loyola (Ill.), using only one first-stringer in the game, but taking a 42-15 halftime lead. Dayton's record now is 15-1.

A top conference game saw Arkansas nip Texas Christian, 74-72, to tie Southern Methodist for first place in the Southwest Conference. The co-leaders will clash on Saturday night.

OTHER GAMES
In other leading games: Holy Cross ranked 15th nationally, pushed its record to 14-2 with a 97-60 romp over Creighton; All-America St. Guen scored 37 as NYU trounced Duquesne 87-84; Yale trounced Brown, 81-53, in the Ivy League; Richmond edged Virginia Tech, 66-60, in the Southern Conference; Julius McCoy scored 27 to lead Michigan State to an 85-78 win over Detroit and a new school career record of 1,134 points; Oklahoma City look an 81-66 win over Loyola (La.); Georgetown (D.C.) handed St. Joseph's (Pa.) its third loss in 16 games, 84-72; Syracuse beat Cornell in overtime, 96-84; Fordham downed Connecticut, 82-72; Wake Forest beat Wake Forest, 89-64; Penn St. beat Navy, 70-65; Army edged Albright, 75-71.

Louisville, Dayton's conqueror ranked sixth nationally with a 16-1 record, hosts Toledo and 14th-ranked St. Louis, visits Wichita in Missouri Valley Conference game in highlights on tonight's program.

Philadelphia Edged 105-104

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Lost in the mad scrambles for second place in the Eastern and the Western Divisions of the National Basketball Assn., is the fact that Philadelphia and Fort Wayne cannot afford to be too complacent about their first-place positions.

Faltering Philadelphia lost its second game in two days to New York Wednesday night, 105-104 in double overtime. Only a Boston 107-106 loss to Minneapolis preserved the Warriors' 3 1/2-game Eastern lead over the runner-up Celtics. The Knicks are 1 1/2 games farther back.

Both Minneapolis and Rochester, 83-77 winner over Syracuse, gained a half-game on the idle Fort Wayne Pistons in the Western. Minneapolis retained its two-day-old second place spot over the Royals by a half-game and is now seven behind the Pistons, with George Mikan rapidly rounding in again their championship stride of other years.

Match Race In Offering

MIAMI, Fla. — A third meeting between Nashua and Swaps shaped up Thursday in the Gulf Stream Handicap March 17, with $100,000 or more awaiting the winner.

Swaps' nomination was received from California in Wednesday's mail and Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, trainer of Nashua, said his colt's nomination is in the mail. Last night Wednesday was the deadline.

Ice Schedule Worth Pains Says US Star
CORTINA D'AMPEZZO, Italy — Figure skating is hard work but Carol Heiss, 18-year-old U. S. star, says "It's worth it."
"My schedule's rough, all right, particularly the one I have to go by in the Winter Olympics here," said Miss Heiss, of Ozone Park, N. Y.
"It's practice, practice and more practice," she said. "And nothing of what I have to do all day is very glamorous."
Carol works almost eight hours every day using a private rink in her hotel here. When she's not practicing, she's brushing up on algebra and French, two subjects she's taking in a correspondence school program designed for professional children.
Briefly this is her schedule:
8 a.m.—Breakfast
1:30-2:30 p.m.—A nap
3-5:30 p.m.—More practice
5:30-6:30 p.m.—Writing letters and signing autographed pictures.
6:30-7:45 p.m.—Schoolwork
8 p.m.—Dinner
9:30 p.m.—Bedtime.
Carol finds schoolwork somewhat tougher than figure skating.
"I just hate algebra," she said, "and the French certainly speak their language better than I do."

Pitt Mentor Denies Offer
PITTSBURGH — Football Coach John Michelosen says he is "very well satisfied" at the University of Pittsburgh and knows nothing of a report he may become head coach at the University of Washington.

Michelosen told a reporter here he has two more years to go on his contract at Pittsburgh.
