

A RECORD NUMBER of March of Dimes (six) were filled during the recent anti-polio fund drive by the Klamath Billiards and the Chuck Wagon Cafes. At far left behind the bar, are shown Fred Slusher, bartender; Charles Schuss, owner of the two establishments, and Bob Alexander, manager. "Rattlesnake Pete" has his back to the camera in the foreground. The man at the far end of the bar is unidentified. Each of the six cards holds $68 of anti-polio campaign funds.

Stella Bown Named Chief

Stella Bown has been elected president of a retired teachers' group. Other officers are Irene Foster, vice president; Edna Russell, secretary; Elsie Burton, treasurer; Maude Melton, program chairman; Augusta Dunbar and Ella Dickenson, publicity; Lorena Ward, auditor; Jane Porter and Maude Melton, legislative committee; Irene Foster, historian; Jane Porter, Lorena Ward, Edna Russell and Ella Dickenson, by-laws chairman.

KLAMATH THEATER PATRONS contributed $768.27 to the March of Dimes this year. The patrons contributed the funds during show intermissions at three Klamath theaters owned by Klamath Theaters Inc. Bert Henson, left, manager of the theaters presented the check to Air Force T-Sgt. James Shrum, one of the three special events sub-chairmen of the drive.

Firm Declares 1st Dividend

A five per cent dividend was declared recently by the employee federal credit union of the Ellingson Lumber Company. According to credit union officials this is the first year that this rate of dividend has ever been declared.

Officers elected for the ensuing year are: Arthur Anderson, re-elected president; Lawrence Amberg, vice president and Mrs. Alex Thompson, re-elected secretary-treasurer.

The new credit committee for the year will be: Gordon Veitch, chairman; Francis Parsons and Jack Emerson. The supervisory committee members are Ralph Jansen, acting chairman; Gail Putnam and Wilbur Book.

The 1956 board of directors will be: Swan Erickson, P. D'Olivo, Fred Stone, Bill Brannan and Clarence Uhrine. The credit union had 121 members on December 31, 1955.

NO THREAT

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Foreign Office in a 300-page "analysis of Communist China's strength" says the Red regime faces no threat of a popular uprising. "The Communist regime receives very strong support from the people," says the book, a compilation of opinions of Japanese experts on China.

ASK FOR PURE-PAK BRAND WIENERS-LUNCH MEATS TOP QUALITY Locally Made, from Inspected Meats — Unconditionally Guaranteed! At your local food store

Wildlife Films Shown

FORT ROCK — A talk on "Conservation of Wild Life" and the showing of color slides, as well as films entitled, "Realm Of The Wild" and "Glacier Park Studies," were presented by Ed Hansen of the Oregon State Game Commission here Thursday night.

The slides — mostly of wild life native to this area — included shots of deer, antelope, and mountain sheep on Hart Mountain, and many were taken by Hansen.

On Friday the speaker, who is game biologist for the southeast regional office, joined the Oregon Cooperative Research Unit from Oregon State College which is now at Drake's flat, near Plush. The group is in its third year of a study of antelope for the game commission.

Hansen, who was graduated from OSC last year, wrote a thesis on "Survival of the Prong Horn Antelope in South Central Oregon in 1953-54." Next week the school talks will be given in Harney County, followed by Malheur County. Hansen plans a return visit next year.

Advertisement for Edmund E. Hass, Resident Manager of Pacific Northwest Company Investment Securities. It includes a portrait of Mr. Hass and details about his services and office location at the Willard Hotel.

Advertisement for Miller's clothing store featuring a "FINAL CLEANUP SALE" on coats, dresses, and suits at 1/2 price. It includes the Miller's logo and contact information.

SEW-EASY ENSEMBLE

Almost Every Household Has Video Ground Rules

By CHARLES MERCER — In practically every orderly household which contains both a TV set and young children there are ground rules on who looks at the set and when.

Such a matter as bad weather can knock the ground rules into a cocked hat, of course. Then, in my home, it's a question of who has the stronger will.

Sunday afternoon in the East is a tough one, for example. From noon on it's a hassle to see who wins—parent or child. The three major networks have quite a few programs which children enjoy and quite a few which their parents favor. Unfortunately most of these fall at the same time on different channels.

At such times are raised fundamental questions in many a parental mind: What is justice? What is discipline? Is this good or bad for Junior? Who's boss around here anyway?

Let's consult the personal opinion of a pediatrician, Dr. Eliza Caldwell, who herself has four children aged 14, 9, 6 and 3.

The basic ground rule in the Caldwell household—and that she recommends for her young patients —is that there is no viewing after 7 p.m.

"If the children watch until 15 minutes before bedtime," says Dr. Caldwell, "they're all keyed up and they won't get to sleep for an hour. First and second graders usually need close to 12 hours sleep and they simply don't get it when they stay up too late."

Disneyland on ABC-TV from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. (Eastern time) on Wednesday evenings raises a great problem, Dr. Caldwell confesses. She thinks it's an excellent program but its time is unfortunate. First and second grade teachers have told her they can't watch it the night before; the kids just aren't as wide awake the next morning.

Every ground rule needs an exception, of course, and the exception in the Caldwell household is Rin Tin Tin, which comes on ABC-TV at 7:30 p.m. Friday. The fact it's Friday, with no school the next day, takes the curse off it.

Admittedly it's tough on Dr. Caldwell's 14-year-old and 8-year-old to maintain 6-year-old viewing habits. But, as every parent knows, it has to be a sporting proposition that if one child can view the set so can another. That, children, is justice.

Dr. Caldwell knows of no television program that is "bad for" the kids. To the contrary, she thinks the programs have a high level of entertainment value. In her personal recommendations she is not concerned with morals; she's concerned with health.

I think she has a point that is as applicable to us elders as to the youngest set. As long as viewing doesn't affect your physical and mental health just help yourself.

Convicted Man Makes Appeal

SAN FRANCISCO (UP) — Convict-slayer Gary Chessman has taken another legal step in his eight-year struggle to escape death in the gas chamber at San Quentin Prison.

The 34-year-old convicted kidnaper has asked the right to appeal Federal Judge Louis E. Goodman's ruling last Jan. 31 refusing to grant him a new trial.

The writ, filed Saturday, claimed Chessman was denied adequate time and opportunity to prepare for the January hearing. It also alleges that Judge Goodman erred in not permitting another judge to rule on a plea for a change of venue.

The 22-page writ, co-signed by attorneys George T. Davis and Rosalie Asher, listed dozens of additional reasons why Goodman should permit an appeal to appellate court.

Advertisement for Contractors Builders Farmers For Quick Heat Portable Heater, featuring a heater unit and contact information for Troy V. Cook.

Advertisement for the Saturday Evening Post featuring a portrait of Gary Cooper and the headline "Yup-it's me, COOP!". It includes details about the magazine's content and subscription information.

Advertisement for Old Crow Bourbon Whiskey, featuring the headline "THE GREATEST NAME IN BOURBON!" and a bottle of the whiskey. It includes promotional text and pricing.

A large advertisement for Oldsmobile cars, featuring the headline "Starfire DESIGN IN EVERY LINE!". It includes images of several Oldsmobile models and detailed text describing their features and performance.