AF Worried Over Rash Of Crashes

WASHINGTON (AP)—A rash of military plane crashes—without any apparent pattern of cause—is giving the Air Force considerable concern.

Since early January, 28 airmen have died in seven air accidents, not including crashes of jet fighters in routine operation and training flights.

These crashes have involved some of the oldest and newest planes used by the Air Force—a C-47 transport and a B-52 jet bomber, for example.

Officials decline to disclose the exact number of accidents. They contend this information would be valuable to Russia.

But according to published news accounts:

A B-52 bomber caught fire as it landed at Ellsworth Air Force Base, S.D., Jan. 4. The crew escaped. An F-101 Voodoo, one of the "Century" series of supersonic jet fighters, crashed Jan. 10 at Eglin AFB, Fla., killing the pilot.

A B-52, newest, biggest and fastest of the heavy bombers, came apart in the air near Tracy, Calif., Feb. 15. Four men parachuted to safety and four died. A KC-97 cargo plane crashed on takeoff near Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 21, killing five men.

A C-47 crashed into a mountain peak in Spain Feb. 24. Three died, three survived. On Feb. 27 there were two crashes—a B-59 bomber near Dayton, Ohio, killing 11 men; a B-47 medium jet bomber near Sedalia, Mo., killing four.

There were close calls, also, like the C-124 which limped to Iceland with engine trouble.

Because there seems to be no immediately discernible pattern in this upsurge of accidents, officials are hesitant about pointing to possible causes. They mention many things that happen in civilian as well as military flying—things like pilot deficiencies. They talk about "unsuitable" airports and navigational aids.

They mention too a growing shortage of experienced maintenance personnel. Air Force mechanics find better paying jobs in industry.

And these officials wonder if there shouldn't be more money available to buy fuel to allow more flying time for pilots.

Cold Weather Chills South

Clear and fairly cold weather prevailed over most of the eastern half of the nation today.

Temperatures dropped to near freezing as far south as Tennessee, Georgia and North Carolina. In Florida readings were 10 to 15 degrees lower than 24 hours earlier as the cold air spread over the Southeast and Northeast sections.

Below-zero weather there again chilled areas in the upper Great Lakes region and northern Minnesota but some warmer air was on the way for the north central states.

The Rocky Mountain section got some relief from the cold. Considerable warming was reported in northwestern Montana, with temperatures as much as 24 degrees higher than yesterday morning. Little change in the weather was reported along the Pacific Coast with readings mostly in the 40s.

Skies were clear in all areas except the lower Great Lakes region and the Pacific Northwest. Snow flurries fell in a belt from northern West Virginia through western sections of Pennsylvania and New York.

Standard Hikes Gasoline Prices

PORTLAND (AP)—Another gas price increase is expected by motorists here in the wake of a wholesale price boost by Standard Oil of California.

It was the second increase in the past two months. This boost was 2 of a cent, lifting wholesale prices to 25.4 cents a gallon for regular gas and 28.4 for ethyl. Small increases also were announced for heavy fuel oil and automobile oils.

Standard was the only major company to announce a boost.

Army Revises Flood Budget

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Army has revised its budget for fiscal 1956 to permit a speedup of flood control studies and projects in Western flood areas.

Lt. Gen. S. D. Sturgis, Army chief of engineers, said Tuesday the $383,997,000 budget recommended by the President for Army civil works has been adjusted by reducing funds for some projects and allotting the money to others.

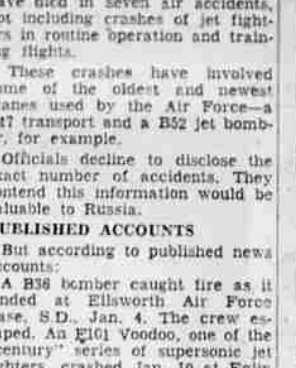

The revisions, Sturgis said, will enable the engineers to start work on some projects without upsetting the budget.

Increases included: Actual construction—Bellingham, Wash. harbor, $400,000 (nothing in budget); Johnson Creek, Ore., $150,000, increase of $50,000.

General investigations—Examinations and surveys, flood control studies, revised request, $2,080,000, an increase of $400,000.

Reductions included: General construction—Chief Joseph Reservoir, Wash., revised figure of $9,300,000, reduction of $3,000,000.

Television Displays Healthy Tendency To Lamponn Itself

NEW YORK (AP)—Television has been displaying a healthy tendency in recent weeks to view some of its activities with candor and even to kid itself a little.

Most recently Max Liebman brought a refreshing satire of television programming and commercials to the home screen via NBC-TV. "Panorama," presented last Sunday evening, was a lot of fun during much of its 90 minutes.

Something that has long needed going and received a rollicking going over from Liebman is that dreary business of screen credits. He offered us credits for every thing—even for the use of cigar-

Group Lauds Indictments

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—A prowhite organization last night approved the indictment of Negro leaders of a bus boycott here and charged that Gov. James E. Folsom "has not proven competent during these grave and grievous times."

The criticism against Folsom was included in a resolution which put the Central Alabama Citizens Council on record as opposed to a biracial commission which might try to solve racial disputes outside the framework of Alabama's segregation laws.

Newsmen were barred from the meeting in the Montgomery City Hall, but police estimated 3,000 attended. The council says it has 12,000 members in this area.

Another resolution commended the Montgomery County grand jury which last week indicted 100 Negroes, including 24 ministers, for violating Alabama's antiboycott law in their protest against racial segregation.

The council also called on state officials to continue enforcement of segregation laws, and changed its name from the Central Alabama Citizens Council to the Montgomery County Citizens Council.

State Sen. Sam Engelhardt, chairman of the organization, said of some birds including the Starling, Magpie and Cow bird, Olla would not support an "independent" biracial commission that would try to mediate racial disputes.

But he said it was feared a biracial commission carrying authority by the Legislature would possibly try to erase existing segregation laws.

Smith Predicts State Sales Tax

PRINEVILLE (AP)—A sales tax will be passed by the next Oregon Legislature, So predicts Gov. Elmo Smith.

He told a group of Crook County residents here Monday that the sales tax should replace, not add to, the present state income tax.

OVER THE GARDEN GATE

By Crystal Cheyne
The Mt. Laki Garden Club held its first meeting of 1950 on February 13 at the Mt. Laki church parlor with Mrs. Warren Woodard as hostess. Assisting her was Mrs. Ed Born, secretary.

Mrs. Jay Fairclough gave information on the proposed flooding of Echo Park in Colorado by a reclamation project plan. Garden clubs throughout the country are opposing the flooding. The Mt. Laki club went on record as being in opposition to the plan.

Ardyce Woodard showed colored pictures of local wild flowers and of some birds including the Starling, Magpie and Cow bird. Olla Houck gave an interesting talk on native trees. Several Oriental flower arrangements were on display for discussion.

The club will make favors, corsages and a table arrangement for the district garden club meeting to be held in Klamath Falls in the spring.
