Tropical Note Fashion Key For Men's Footwear In '56

Tropical in weight and tropical in color is the fashion keynote for men's leather footwear this spring and summer, according to the Leather Industries of America. This, of course, is directly in line with the switch to lightweight apparel in every phase of a man's wardrobe.

The new tropical leathers retain the ruggedness of conventional leather, but weigh far less. At once more comfortable and more colorful, they go perfectly with the lightweight spring and summer suits and sportswear outfits of 1956. For town wear, the light-colored and two-toned tropical leather shoe will be increasingly popular, this year. Leather combinations of black-and-white, and brown-and-white, as well as rich colors like ivywood, rocky tan, desert copper and butternut, accent the contrast between shoes and summer suits and create just the right balance of good taste and summer freedom.

Lightweight suedes and buckskin in pale tones such as smoke grey and off-white beige, with new light leather soles, also stand out in the wide array of lighter leather shoes for casual wear. Slimmer, lighter-weight, leather soles and open-weave upper leather are also playing a role in leather's switch to tropical lightweight fashion and comfort. Perforated and woven leathers are especially good-looking in moccasin and plaited styles, designed along tailored lines.

Most important style this summer is the moccasin toe—in an infinite number of variations: slim Continental slip-on, conventional slip-on, one, two and three-eyelet models, and many with contrasting stitching to lend a note of color below the male ankle.

Plain toes and wing-tips with a minimum of detail run a close second. In most styles, toes are less round—again, the Italian influence. Black and brown are the most popular colors.

"Youth Will Be Served" . . . Often and Generously . . .

With teen-agers in your home you should know the "art" of teen-age party giving.

The fad right now seems to be for spur-of-the-moment parties. A teen-ager calls home after a ball game or from another teen-ager's house where the idea for a party has suddenly hatched and says, "Can I have a few kids over for a party?"

It's a mistake to take that term "A few kids" at face value. The number may run anywhere from a dozen to 40. And it's foolish to think that if eight is the time set for a party, eight o'clock is when the guests will start to arrive. Teen-agers are impatient and before eight ever rolls around, the house will be full to overflowing.

Food for a party is a simple matter. You load the kitchen sink with sacks of ice and soft drinks. You whip up everything in the cupboard into "dips" and lay in a supply of fancy crackers, potato chips, etc., for dunking purposes. You triple your best cookie recipes. Then set everything out where the eating can start with the party. Have enough refills so it can last until the end.

Half of the arriving guests will be carrying their favorite records under their arms. When the record player gets turned up to full volume you wonder why they bothered. All their favorites sound alike.

Once the party is under way, all you have to do, as a parent, is make yourself scarce. You stick your head in only occasionally to make sure everything is going all right. Your teen-ager will quickly assure you that everything is fine. This is your signal to disappear again.

If you've provided enough food and kept out from under foot and made no embarrassingly old-fashioned suggestions for games or singing around the piano, your teen-ager will reward you with, "Gee, thanks, Mom. It was a swell party" as the last '30 or '42 model car is finally started, and is roaring down the drive.

The person who parks his car so as to use two parking spaces instead of one shows a complete disregard of the other person. He might as well put a sign on his car reading, "Nobody matters but me."

TWEEDY dress doubles as a coat. Luggage, too, has extra features - longer wear, scuff-proofing, more room with less weight.
