"DENNIS THE MENACE"

"MY CUSTOMER WANTS A SHAVE, BERT. WILL YOU PLEASE WATCH YOUR CUSTOMER LIKE A HAWK?"

'Medic' Producer Says TV Viewers Want Birth Scene

By ALINE MOSBY
 HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Do television viewers want to see a caesarean birth on their home screens? "Medic" producer Frank LaTourrette is counting stacks of letters from persons who say they do.

The mail bag for the producer of the NBC-TV series on medicine has been extra-heavy since the network cancelled a scheduled controversial program showing a baby being born by caesarean section.

"And only three letters out of 200 have been against the show, and those were largely crank letters," LaTourrette said today as he sifted through his mail.

"The letters saying the program should be shown are intelligently written. And everyone I've shown the show to thinks it should go on."

The provocative program still has the network and the "Medic" makers playing tug-of-war. NBC refuses to run the filmed show unless part of the operation is deleted. But LaTourrette and writer Jim Moser refuse to lay censoring fingers on their celluloid.

"We're still at an impasse," the producer smiled.

Furthermore, LaTourrette said, he's charging ahead with plans for more controversial shows. Last Monday "Medic" featured medical experiments on animals, and LaTourrette expects complaints from anti-vivisectionists.

Another future program is about arthritis, and "Medic" will film an actual rare operation to straighten an arthritic back—if LaTourrette can find one.

"NBC asked us to cut the scene

Climax Show To Present 'Pale Horse, Pale Rider'

By CHARLES MERCER
 NEW YORK (AP)—One of the best stories published in America in the past 25 years is "Pale Horse, Pale Rider" by Katherine Anne Porter. Tonight it is televised on Climax! "Pale Horse, Pale Rider" is a quietly written story of a young newspaper woman who falls in love with an Army lieutenant during World War I as he is about to leave for overseas. She is stricken with the flu and he cares for her until he too falls ill. He dies, but she survives. From her suffering she—and the reader—finds maturity and nobility of character in the will to live.

The title is from a Negro spiritual: "Pale horse, pale rider, done taken my lover away..."

Whether the TV adaptation conveys the mood and self-discovery and wisdom of this excellent story I do not know; I haven't read the script. And neither has Miss Porter, she said the other day when she came to town from the country house in Connecticut where she is completing her first full-length novel. She is a beautiful woman of 61 with white hair and shining blue eyes.

While pleased at having a wide audience of readers, she writes to satisfy only herself—and only from her own experience. Discussing "Pale Horse, Pale Rider," she said:

"I was quite young during World War I in Denver and I had a job on the Rocky Mountain News. Bill the city editor (the city editor of her story is named Bill), put me to covering the theaters.

"I met a boy, an Army lieutenant... Our time was so short and we were so much in love. But we were shy. It was one step forward and two steps back with us... I was taken ill with the flu. They gave me up. The paper had my obit set in type.

"I knew I was dying. But I didn't die. I mustered the will to live. My hair turned white and then it fell out. The first time I tried to rise to a sitting position I fell and broke an arm. I had phlebitis in one leg and they said I'd never walk again. But I was determined to walk and live again, and in six months I was walking and my hair had grown back."

"And the boy, Miss Porter?"

"It's in the story." At the sudden memory she fought back tears—and won gallantly. "He died. The last I remember seeing him... It's a true story... It seems to me true that I died then. I died once, and I never have feared death since..."

Camp Meeting Scheduled Here

Klamath Falls has been selected as the location for the next meeting of the Southern Oregon District of the Oregon Section of the American Camping Association, scheduled for May 1.

Three local agencies were represented at the Medford meeting on March 20. Mrs. Lawrence French, Camp Fire Girls executive director, is chairman of the group. Also attending were Mrs. Keith Cobo and Mrs. Quincey Moore of Klamath Area Girl Scout Council and Jim Harpole and Jerry Thorne of the Modoc Area Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Thirty-one people, representing seven communities in Southern Oregon and eight different organizations, attended the meeting where plans were made for a study of standards for both day and established camps. Workshops on both day camping and resident camping will be a feature of the May meeting, along with a discussion of the availability of surplus foods for camp use.
