

FRANK STANKO

Stanko Joins OTI Staff

Frank D. Stanko of Green River, Wyoming, was recently engaged as assistant dean of men at Oregon Technical Institute. Stanko received his B.S. degree from Colorado A and M College where he completed graduate study for his master's degree in guidance and counseling in August, 1956.

Stanko, as a member of the staff in the office of student affairs, will assist in the guidance and counseling program but his chief duties are in connection with the organization and operation of men's dormitory living groups on the campus. He comes to this new assignment following four years of teaching, coaching, and counseling experience in high schools in Colorado and Wyoming.

The family resides on the campus in Wing 1 of the Farrell Buildings, and includes Mrs. Stanko (Betty) and three children, Michael, Mary Therese, and Frank, whose ages range from just over one year to just over three years.

AAA Wants Better Roads

PITTSBURGH (UPI)—Speed-up of the nation's road building program from 20 to 40 years could save 200,000 lives, according to a report to the American Automobile Association.

Glenn C. Richards, commissioner of public works at Detroit, Mich., asserted the super-roads would drastically reduce the number of traffic accidents and highway fatalities. He also said better local roads would permit working men in the city to get home for evening meals without the worries of being late.

Richards participated in a panel which explored the developments stemming from the $33 billion federal highway program enacted at the last session of Congress. The panel featured activities Tuesday at the AAA's 54th annual meeting.

Keith L. Seegmiller, executive secretary of the Association of County Officials, urged the motor club representatives to "look into their county courthouses" in their quest for better roads.

Dunsmuir PTA Sets Drive

DUNSMUIR—October was announced as membership month at the initial meeting of the Dunsmuir Elementary School PTA last week. Mrs. Robert Van Wormer is membership chairman.

The program for the year including money-making projects was announced at the meeting and the annual budget was adopted. A food sale on October 10 is the fall project and a card party on March 1 is the winter project.

The faculty and staff of the elementary school were introduced at the meeting and were presented with complimentary PTA memberships for the year. Glen Minn's fifth grade class won the room banner.

The meeting concluded with a recording of the most concert of the Mothersingers at the PTA convention in Sacramento this spring. Refreshments were served by the executive board.
