TOM FOWLER

Then . . .

Now . . .

Tom Fowler, parts manager for Balsiger Motor Company, caught in a nostalgic mood the other day, turned back the hands of time and revealed himself as something of a rover.

So-called experts on human behavior and purveyors of advice on how to live and like it, probably would have admonished Fowler that "rolling stones gather no moss" if they had gotten to him in time.

Even when he was a small boy in Geddes, S.D., Fowler had dreams of getting around. At that time he was fascinated by the history of the Missouri River which flowed a short distance from his home. He pictured himself someday following in the wake of explorers Lewis and Clark and paddling his way to the headwaters of the mighty stream.

WENT WEST

Fowler went west all right but not by boat. He traveled to Idaho Falls, Idaho, in an old beat up Chandler automobile many years after his riverbank dreams had faded. His first job in the west was with a bridge building crew on the Oregon Short Line Railroad.

"That was in 1927," he said, "and I got a real taste of the west working on the railroad. I remember some hectic days and nights in Dillon, Montana, that would have fitted right into a wild west movie."

Before his trek to Idaho and Montana, Fowler had some interesting experiences in the Middle West. During the prohibition era, he had a job as traveling salesman for a Minneapolis "unfermented" wine manufacturer.

HAD GIMMICK

"This product had a gimmick to it," Fowler explained. "The stuff was put out in charred kegs. To produce the real McCoy all that was required was a little sugar and a little patience. To transform the unfermented wine into a concoction that was real potent, all you had to do was dump in a little sugar and let the keg sit in a warm place for 30 days."

Fowler explained that on this venture which legally circumvented the dry law, he traveled with another salesman.

"When we arrived at a town," he said, "we launched an investigation to determine who liked liquor. It was usually easy to compile quite a list of persons who didn't string along with Mr. Volsted. Then we'd present our 'keg plan' to such persons and we made a lot of sales."

AD MAN

Other jobs that Fowler held were with advertising department of the Standard Oil Company at Sioux City, Iowa, Shell Oil Company, Salt Lake City and Ford Motor Car Company, Salt Lake and Richmond, California.

During his sojourn in Salt Lake, Fowler was married to the former Mae Myers of that city. Shortly after the nuptials, Ford transferred him to Richmond.

Ten years ago, Fowler took his present job with Balsiger Motor Company. Mr. and Mrs. Fowler and their son, Robert, 10, a pupil at Sacred Heart Academy, reside at 216 Washington.

'Electric Heat' Program Set

LaPINE — Beginning October 1, Midstate Electric Cooperative will sponsor an "electric heat" program for its membership, George M. Larimer, manager, reports.

For six months, for every 1000-watt unit of heating installed, Midstate customers will receive $5 to assist with costs of additional wiring and service entrance equipment.

During August and September, 23 customers installed electric water heaters for each of which the cooperative paid $15. Previously, on a similar program, 36 domestic water pumps were put into service.

Larimer regards these load building incentives as successful and noted that appliance dealers of the area have helped the program by promotion campaigns.

DOG BITES ESTES

BRADFORD, Pa. (UP)—A small dog bit a man Friday and made news. The dog nipped Democratic vice presidential candidate Sen. Estes Kefauver on his shaking hand when he gave it a friendly pat. The senator dabbed iodine on his wound and limited his greetings to potential voters.

Minister Raps R&R Imports

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP)—South Africa's foreign minister, Eric Louw, Friday listed rock 'n' roll, comics and pulp magazines among American exports his country could do without.

He told Johannesburg's American Luncheon Club: "In the past you also sent us the abomination of the jukebox. When I was minister for economic affairs, I put it on the prohibited list of imports. I sincerely hope my successor keeps it there, even if it means contravention of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade."

"DENNIS THE MENACE"

"WOULD YA CUT THAT HAIR AROUND HIS MOUTH? IT GETS IN HIS MILK."
