Ho! Hum!
Last year we were having too much rain.
This year we're having too much politics.
Such is life.

Democratic National Chairman Butler accuses Ike today of MAKING NO EFFORT, PERIOD! to win Republican support for a federal school aid bill.

Personally, that inclines me to put one more good mark on Ike's record. When Uncle Sam begins paying for the schools, he'll begin RUNNING the schools.

In all walks of life, the guy who pays the bills winds a big stick.

It costs money to keep them going, but I think we'd better handle our own schools.

Besides—
Federal money comes out of the same pockets as local money. Both federal money and local money are TAX money. Tax money comes out of the pockets of the taxpayers. There is nowhere else for it to come from.

About the only way you can justify asking for federal aid for your schools is to admit that your area is so poverty-stricken that it just can't raise the money. I don't think anyone in any community in Southern Oregon or Far Northern California is willing to admit that.

Speaking (non-politically) of our schools, Dr. Herbert Scoville, assistant director of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, says this morning the average Russian high school graduate has a much better grounding in science than the average American high school graduate.

That is something to worry about. How are we going to run the new world without scientists and technicians? These new gadgets won't run themselves.

Every housewife knows that.

Just what, you may ask, is an "intelligence" agency?

The blunt answer to your question is that it is an outfit that spies on our enemies. In the rarified atmosphere of diplomacy, it isn't considered kosher to speak of snooping as spying.

Spying is a bad word.
Intelligence is a good word.

Getting back (shudder!) to politics—

You must have noticed that back at the beginning of the campaign our upper bracket candidates were so polite in referring to each other that butter wouldn't melt in their mouths.

They called it "taking the high road."

Now they're swinging haymakers at each other at every whistle stop.

They call that "taking the low road."

Anyway, the low road is now crowded like a Los Angeles freeway and you could shoot a cannon down the high road without wounding anybody.

How come?

It's like this:

You can go peacefully about your business, being kind to your family, loving children and animals, paying your bills, contributing your share to the United Fund, doing your part to support your church, and nobody will pay any attention to you.

But—
JUST START A FIST FIGHT ON THE STREET CORNER.
Everybody will be interested in you then.

JACKSON, Mich. (P)—A new building under construction collapsed Wednesday and unidentified reports were that 10 persons were killed and at least 20 injured.

Between 30 and 40 workmen were believed trapped in the basement of the three-story building of Consumers Power Co., being built about four miles north of Jackson.

Heavy earth-moving equipment was sent to the scene along with every available ambulance in the city. Hospitals also were asked to send doctors and nurses.

SP Daylight
Trips Reduced

PORTLAND (P)—The Southern Pacific Railroad's Shasta Daylight streamliners will drop to three round trips a week between Portland and San Francisco starting Oct. 15.

This reduction from daily round trips stems, said vice president Claude E. Peterson Wednesday, from a daily loss of $5,000 since the peak travel tapered off.

Peterson said the streamliners will operate northbound from Oakland pier on Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays and southbound from Portland on Tuesday, Friday and Sundays. Departure and arrival times will be unchanged.

Service will be stepped up to daily schedules again during the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays and in the summer, Peterson said.

Shepilov Confident
Of Canal Solution

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (P)—Soviet Foreign Minister Shepilov, arriving Wednesday for the U.N. Security Council debate on the Suez Canal, declared he is "deeply convinced we shall be able to find a reasonable solution to the problems troubling us."

The Soviet foreign minister said this could be achieved "through negotiations on a basis of equality and fairness, and by means of a correct combination of the interests of Egypt as a sovereign state, and the interests of all other states using the canal."

Shepilov and six other foreign ministers, including Egypt's Mahmoud Fawzi, will take part in the Council debate opening Friday. Egypt is not a member of the 11-nation Council but was invited to participate as an interested party.

Shepilov, in an airport statement, asserted that attempts were still being made to settle the Suez problem "from positions of strength."

These attempts are caused by lack of understanding of the spirit of our times and of the renovation of the forms of social life that is in progress throughout the vast expanse of the East," he continued.

"It is ignorance of these processes that lies at the back of all hot-headed and impractical projects to resolve the Suez problem through compulsion. But we hope that the advocates of these measures are becoming even fewer in numbers."

Private huddles were being held at the U.N. in advance of the Friday debate. Selwyn Lloyd of Britain, Koca Popovic of Yugoslavia and Fawzi were already on hand.

Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium and Christian Pineau of France were expected during the day and Secretary of State Dulles by Friday or perhaps sooner.

Britain and France were preparing a resolution for the council calling for international control of the 103-mile waterway nationalized by Egypt July 26. They counted on U.S. support.

Yugoslavia and other nations were reported working for a compromise. The Soviet Union has backed Egypt in the canal dispute.

Lloyd and Pineau were to meet tonight at dinner with Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., U.S. representative on the council.

A British spokesman said the resolution was on paper but that revisions still were being discussed. He confirmed published reports that the resolution would ask the council to recommend (1) that Egypt cooperate with canalizing countries in provisional arrangements to keep the waterway open to all nations and (2) negotiate a final settlement based on the majority proposals from the first London Suez conference.

PROPOSALS BACKED
Those proposals, backed by 18 of the 23 nations attending the mid-August parley, called for an international board linked with the U.N. to operate the canal. The plan was rejected by Egyptian President Nasser.

Any such British-French resolution faced the possibility of a Soviet veto in the council.

Western sources said the United States, Britain and France are determined to push for council endorsement of an international control plan.

Heart Attack
Takes Hunter

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The death of a Scappoose man Tuesday increased to seven the number of persons who have died in the woods from heart attacks since the Oregon deer hunting season opened Saturday.

The latest victim was James Callahan, 62, who had gone hunting with a party from Scappoose. He died at their camp in the Desolation Creek area about 40 miles north of John Day. J. Carl Driskill, Grant County coroner, said he suffered a heart seizure.

Before the season opened one man was fatally shot as he and a friend prepared to go hunting. At least three other hunters have been wounded.

Charles Pike, 20, Bend, was missing Tuesday night on a hunting trip some 30 miles southwest of Bend. Foresters and state police were searching.

Howard Foster, Bend, said Pike became separated from him when they were hunting Monday and that Pike failed to return to their car.

KF Kidnap
Lead Told
By Police

City police today got their first substantial lead concerning the men involved in the late Sunday night kidnap-robbery involving a supermarket manager in Klamath Falls. Police working on the case say they are almost positive the man reported is one of those involved in the case.

A woman called the station to say that she and her husband noted a suspicious acting man about 11:40 Sunday night when they were leaving the Esquire Theater. The woman said the man was standing in a nearby grocery store lot and was apparently watching another couple walk down the street. When he spotted the informing woman and her husband, he moved quickly from the lot and ducked into a nearby yard which was surrounded by hedges.

Police feel that the report is particularly significant in that the yard the man ducked into is essentially the same location where a 6-year-old girl Monday found the green gloves and a mask believed to have been used in the robbery.

The woman and her husband gave the following description of the man: about 28 years old, 5 feet 8 inches or 9 inches tall, chubby build weighing about 180 pounds, apparently of Greek or Italian descent, black shiny hair, sharp features, and wearing a navy blue nylon jacket and tan slacks. The man was also reported carrying a brown paper sack and supporting it with one hand on the bottom as though it were filled with something reasonably heavy.

Police believe he could have later been picked up in a car somewhere in the vicinity of the Seventh and Ninth street areas of Pine Street. Police ask that they be called by anyone who believes they saw such a man in the described vicinity around midnight Sunday night.

Rogue Hearing
Set In Medford

PORTLAND (P)—Two Senate committees will hold a hearing on Rogue River reclamation and flood control development in Medford, Oct. 19, Sen. Neuberger (D-Ore) said Wednesday.

Neuberger said both the Public Works Committee and the Interior and Insular Affairs Committee will take part. He said he and Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore) both had persuaded both committees to participate in view of the fact the Interior Committee will be at Klamath Falls a day earlier for a hearing on the Klamath Indian Reservation.

Neuberger, a member of both committees, said Sen. James E. Murray of Montana, Interior Committee chairman, and Sen. Dennis Chavez of New Mexico, Public Works Committee chairman, will direct the hearing.

A week later Army Engineers will hold a Rogue flood control hearing at Grants Pass.

Fans Roar As President
Attends First Series Game

NEW YORK (P)—President Eisenhower attended his first World Series game Wednesday and got a rousing, roaring welcome from thousands of baseball fans crammed into Brooklyn's Ebbets Field.

Obviously enjoying his outing immensely, Eisenhower broke out his famed grin and waved his hands.

But along the 15-mile route from LaGuardia Airport to the ball park, where the New York Yankees and Brooklyn Dodgers tangled in the first game of the series, crowds were skimpy.

Of course, the White House had advertised President Ike's flight to New York and the ball game as a nonpolitical affair. But it also had advertised the route he was taking to and from the park.

In some places only knots of people were out. In others, none at all—mainly along the Queens Parkways. They thickened in Brooklyn, but not to heroic proportions.

Many of those who did turn out cheered Eisenhower wildly. And he responded by standing up in the back of a special bubble-top car, brought up from Washington, to flash the grin, get the arms going, and yell back greetings himself.

At the ball field, the President drove through the centerfield gate directly onto the green carpeted field and rode down the third base line to home plate.

The rival managers, and top officials of baseball greeted him there, and players of both teams paraded past for a handshake and greeting.

Eisenhower's flight to New York for the series opener was billed as a nonpolitical trip. No other candidates were invited to confer with him and no political speeches were on tap.

But Eisenhower wasn't passing up the chance to smile and wave at anybody in Queens and Brooklyn who wanted to see him as he rode from the airport to the ball field and back again.

AIR BATTLE
TAIPEI (P)—The Chinese Nationalists reported Wednesday that four of their FB4 Thunderjets battled furiously with four Chinese Communist MIG17s off the South China Coast. The Nationalists claimed two of the Red jets were damaged, one seriously, but that the Nationalist planes returned to their home base unscathed.

The hospital said three of the crew were dead on arrival there. The hospital said one of the injured was in good condition. There was no immediate report on the others.

A civilian employee in the air base administration building said he heard on the communications system speaker a distress call from the incoming plane. He said the Globemaster first reported it was losing one engine, then two. He added that fire trucks were on the runway awaiting the plane's arrival.

The employee said he saw a ball of flame as the plane crashed, careening over on its left wing tip.

Police Spur
Search For Loose Con

COQUILLE (P)—An abandoned taxicab was found Tuesday night on Seven Devils Road, spurring the search for a man who kidnapped a Bend cab driver at gun point and dumped him along the same narrow mountain road connecting Charleston and Bandon on the coast.

Police said the man has been identified from pictures as Ernest Loring Gibson, one of four men who escaped from the Linn County jail at Albany last month. Gibson once lived in the Coos Bay area and is familiar with the brush-covered hills in the Seven Devils area.

Bloodhounds and teams of state and county police scoured the area Tuesday night after the cab was discovered.

The men and dogs continued their search under low clouds and through pockets of ground fog Wednesday morning.

NO CONNECTIONS
Although Gibson knows the area, police believe he has no home connections or relatives in this region.

The 40-year-old cab driver, Loyal Van Dyke, said he was found and dumped from his cab Tuesday morning. He got loose and made his way to a chrome mine, where state police were called. Van Dyke identified a photograph of Gibson as the man who kidnapped him, State Police Sgt. H. C. Snider said.

Van Dyke said the man got in his cab at Bend Monday and arranged a trip to Eugene. There, the driver said, the man pulled a gun and forced Van Dyke to continue on to the coast.

Police set up road blocks and manned them through the night on the chance the fugitive was able to pick up another car.

Gibson and three companions were facing life terms when they were overpowered a jailer and escaped at Albany. One of them, Dan C. Ott, 45, drowned in the Willamette River near Salem not long after the escape.

The others, still at large, are James Arthur Patton, 39, Long Beach, Calif., and Earl Junior Bonnie, 31, Silverton.

Plane Crash
Kills Three

CHARLESTON, S.C. (P)—A C124 Globemaster crashed and burned Wednesday at the Charleston Air Force Base. Three of the 10 men aboard were killed.

The others were sped to the U. S. Naval Hospital here with undetermined injuries.

The huge four-engine plane, coming in from Bermuda, hit a tree and crashed-landed during an instrument approach about 7:30 a.m., and was destroyed. A light fog hung over the base at the time.

The hospital said three of the crew were dead on arrival there. The hospital said one of the injured was in good condition. There was no immediate report on the others.

A civilian employee in the air base administration building said he heard on the communications system speaker a distress call from the incoming plane. He said the Globemaster first reported it was losing one engine, then two. He added that fire trucks were on the runway awaiting the plane's arrival.

Maglie Pitches 6-3
Victory For Brooks

BROOKLYN (P)—The Brooklyn Dodgers shelled lefty Whitey Ford for six hits, including two homers, in the first three innings Wednesday, and went on to beat the New York Yankees 6-3 in the World Series opener before a crowd of 34,479, including President Eisenhower and several Cabinet members. Gil Hodges' homer with two on base in the third was the deciding wallop.

Sal (The Barber) Maglie, 39-year-old Dodger pitcher, recovered from a shaky start in which Mickey Mantle's first inning homer sent the Yanks off in front, and tamed the Yankee bats the rest of the way.

The Yanks used four pitchers as Ford was lifted for a pinch hitter after giving up six hits and five runs in the first three innings. Johnny Kucks, Tom Morgan and Bob Turley, all righthanders, followed Ford on the mound but their solid relief work came too late.

Maglie frequently was in difficulties as the Yanks put men on base in nearly every inning, but he got some good fielding support and was invincible in the right spots.

He struck out ten, walked only four and yielded nine hits. The Dodgers made nine hits off the four Yankee hurlers, including a homer by Jackie Robinson in addition to Hodges' big blow.

YANKEES FIRST
Bauer grounded out to Robinson. Slaughter singled off Hodges' glove wide of first base. Mantle hit a home run high over the right field screen into the parking lot across the street, scoring Slaughter ahead of him. It was Mantle's fourth homer hit in the presence of President Eisenhower. Berra walked. Don Bessent, a righthander, started warming up in the Dodger bullpen. Skowron struck out. McDougald struck out.

Two runs, two hits, no errors, one left.

DODGERS FIRST
Gilliam bounced out to McDougald. Reese lined to Bauer who made a fine running catch in the right field corner with his back to the wall. Snider rolled out. Skowron to Ford who covered first.

No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

YANKEES SECOND
Martin fouled to Campanella. Carey struck out. Ford struck out.

DODGERS SECOND
Robinson lined a home run into the lower left field stands. It was his second World Series homer. Hodges dropped a pop fly single into short center. Mantle limped noticeably as he charged the ball. Furillo lined a double to left center, scoring Hodges with the tying run. Mantle failed in an attempt to make a back-handed stop of the ball, which was recovered by Slaughter. No error was charged. Johnny Kucks, a righthander, began warming up in the Yankee bullpen. Campanella flied to Bauer, Furillo racing to third after the catch. Ford's attempted pickoff of Furillo got past Carey, but Furillo had slid back into the bag and was unable to advance. Amoroso flied to Mantle in shallow right center, and Mickey's perfect peg to the plate kept Furillo at third. Maglie struck out.

Two runs, three hits, no errors, one left.

YANKEES THIRD
Bauer singled to short left. Slaughter singled through the hole between third and short. Bauer stopping at second. Bessent got up to throw again. Mantle looked at a third strike. Berra popped up to Robinson. Skowron hit a high chopper to Robinson, who threw out Slaughter at second.

No runs, two hits, no errors, two left.

DODGERS THIRD
Gilliam popped to McDougald. Reese beat out a hit to deep short. Snider dropped a Texas leaguer in front of Mantle, who came in slowly again as though he were favoring his groin injury. Reese held up at second. Robinson lined to Mantle in left center, the runners holding. Hodges homered into the left field stands to put the Dodgers ahead 5-2. It was Hodges' fourth home run in series competition. Bauer made a fine running catch of Furillo's fly in short right.

Three runs, three hits, no errors, none left.

YANKEES FOURTH
Tom Morgan, a righthander, started warming up for the Yankees. McDougald flied to Amoroso in left center. Martin hit the first pitch into the lower left field stands for his fourth series homer. Carey flied to Furillo. George Wilson, batting for Ford, struck out as Kucks replaced Morgan in the Yankee bullpen.

One run, one hit, no errors, none left.

DODGERS FOURTH
Kucks went to the mound for the Yankees. Campanella doubled off the exit gate in extreme center field. Amoroso rapped a line single to center, scoring Campanella. Maglie, trying to sacrifice, bunted to Skowron, who started a lightning double play to McDougald to Martin covering first. Gilliam's sharp grounder skipped through Skowron's legs for an error. Gilliam stole second. Reese struck out.

One run, two hits, one error, one left.

YANKEES FIFTH
Bauer singled over Reese's head. Slaughter popped to Robinson. Mantle walked. Berra flied to Amoroso. Skowron flied to Amoroso.

No runs, one hit, no errors, two left.

DODGERS FIFTH
Snider lined to Slaughter. Robinson hit a soft liner to Slaughter. Hodges bounced out to McDougald.

No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

YANKEES SIXTH
McDougald struck out. It was Maglie's seventh strikeout. Martin popped to Gilliam. Carey singled over Maglie's head and off the bare hand of the on-charging Robinson. Bob Cerv, batting for Kucks, singled to second. Bauer popped to Hodges.

No runs, two hits, no errors, two left.

DODGERS SIXTH
Morgan became the third Yankee pitcher. McDougald threw out Furillo. Campanella lined to Mantle. Amoroso flied to Slaughter.

No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

YANKEES SEVENTH
Slaughter lined to Snider, Mantle walked. Bessent and Labine again started warming up. Berra lined to Furillo. Gilliam made a leaping catch of Skowron's liner.

DODGERS SEVENTH
Mantle made a nice running catch of Maglie's fly in short right-center. Gilliam got the first Dodger walk. Reese pounced a hit-and-run single to center, sending Gilliam to third. McDougald cut off Mantle's throw toward third and caught Reese off first with Skowron tagging him in the rundown. Snider was given an intentional base on balls. Robinson forced Snider.

No runs, one hit, no errors, two left.

YANKEES EIGHTH
McDougald struck out for the third time. Martin walked. Joe Collins, batting for Carey, struck out on three pitches to become Maglie's ninth strikeout victim. Tommy Byrne, batting for Morgan, fouled out to Campanella.

DODGERS EIGHTH
Bullet Bob Turley took the mound for the Yankees. Martin shifted to third and Jerry Coleman went to second. Hodges struck out. McDougald threw out Furillo. Campanella was called out on strikes.

No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

YANKEES NINTH
Bauer struck out swinging for Maglie's 10th strikeout. Slaughter lined a single to left for his third hit. Mantle rapped into a double play. Gilliam to Reese to Hodges to end the game.
