The "Manufacturing Plant" OF THE Herald and News...

The Composing Room---

The actual "manufacturing" of your Herald and News starts in the composing room. The news that has been written and the ads that have been sold are created in lead by skilled operators and printers.

A reporter's news copy is first perforated on paper tape, which in turn is used to operate the typesetting machines much the same as rolls of music operated the player piano.

Advertising copy is manually set in type by an operator at one of the linecasting machines. The type then goes to a compositor who "builds" the type into an ad.

News type and advertisements are assembled into a "chase" by the "makeup" man, whose finished product looks the same as a newspaper page—except that it is made entirely of lead.

The Engravers --

The pictures that you see on this page are printed from zinc plates, etched by the engraving department.

The engravers use a negative of a picture or drawing to expose a sheet of light-sensitive zinc. A series of acid baths then wash away the unexposed metal, leaving a raised printing surface.

The Herald and News is one of the few papers in Oregon equipped with a zinc engraving plant.
