Coyotes Stir Californians

SACRAMENTO (UP)— There's something about reports of coyotes running around with bells on their necks that apparently takes the credulity of many people, including newspaper editors. The United Press carried an exclusive disclosure last July that the Department of Fish and Game had put bells around necks of some coyotes to trace migrations. Since then, the belled animals' plight has caused quite a stir in Northern California and one newspaper offered a $100 reward to anyone finding such a coyote. Recently, another U.P. dispatch told of the poor luck of one of its correspondents on a hunting trip. He said he sat by a deer trail in the darkness, with the silence broken only by the occasional tinkle of a coyote's bell. First, a newspaper queried: "Do coyotes really wear bells?" Another newspaper printed the story but changed it to read "coyote's yell," while still another carried the story as "the tinkle of a cow's bell." As the reporter explained it: "It was dark and there was a tinkle. There also was a coyote's howl. The tinkle could have come from a cow. But who knows?"

Workers Find Three Bodies

JACKSON, Mich. (U)— Rescuers Friday found the bodies of three more workmen in the steel-and-concrete tomb where 10 men died following the sudden collapse of a partially completed office building. Only one body still has not been recovered from the rubble. The 10 were killed when, without warning, the three-million-dollar, four-story Consumers Power Co. building near here crumpled Wednesday afternoon, cascading 6,000 tons of concrete and steel into the basement. It was one of Michigan's worst industrial disasters.

Northern California Zone Enjoys Same Duck Season As Oregon For First Time

For the first time in the history of this area a special zone has been established in Northern California in order that the migratory waterfowl season will coincide with that of Oregon. The area, shown in the accompanying map, lies in a small area of both Modoc and Siskiyou counties and covers all the area currently embracing the Lower Klamath and Tulelake National Wildlife Refuges. Hunters are reminded that all state and federal regulations pertaining to the hunting of migratory waterfowl must be observed. Those areas within the reserve which are open to public hunting have been plainly marked and maps and directions may be obtained at the Tulelake Refuge headquarters. This area will open on October 13, a week earlier than the rest of the state of California (with the exception of another special zone along the Colorado River). Shooting will start one half hour before sunrise on opening day and every day thereafter. California has adopted a straight season this year instead of the split season of the past several years. Hunters are also reminded that in California the season on coots does not open until November 17 and will continue through January 25. The limit is 25 birds per day. A detailed description of the special zone follows: Oct. 13 - Dec. 31: In the area described as: Beginning at a point on the State Line Road between Oregon and California approximately 1/4 mile east of its intersection with Highway 97; thence south along the west side of Indian Tom Lake on the Lairds Landing Road approximately 1 1/4 miles; thence east approximately 1 mile; thence south and east approximately 5 1/2 miles to the intersection of the Lairds Landing Road and the Portertield Ranch Road; thence south and east on the Lairds Landing Road approximately 1 mile; thence north and east to the Oklahoma Flats Community; thence south 1/2 mile; thence east approximately 1 1/4 miles; thence south and east to Lairds Landing; thence east and north along the Chalk Banks road to the northwest corner of Section 30, T. 47 N., R. 3 E.; thence east across Sheepley Ridge on the section line common to sections 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, and 30, approximately 6 miles; thence due east approximately 1 mile across Section 30, T. 47 N., R. 4 E.; to the Hill Road along the west side of T. 4; thence south along the Hill Road approximately 6 miles to its intersection with the north boundary of the Lava Beds National Monument; thence east along the north boundary of the Lava Beds National Monument approximately 9 1/2 miles to the northeast corner of the Lava Beds National Monument; thence 150 yards east to the west perimeter road of the Panhandle area; thence south and east along the west Panhandle Perimeter Road approximately 4 miles to the south end of the Panhandle; thence approximately 2 miles north and east along the Panhandle Perimeter Road to its intersection with the Great North-
