

SOLONS WAGE DISARM BATTLE

In The Day's News

By FRANK JENINS
 One of the AP's top political writers, Morrie Landsberg, has just completed a survey of the political situation in California. As a result of his findings, he concludes that the outcome of the Presidential campaign in California will be decided by what he calls a "great block" of uncommitted and independent voters.

He adds that at this time four years ago it was pretty apparent that Dwight Eisenhower would sweep the state—and he did. But, he says, it is just as clear NOW that a considerable shrinkage has occurred in the ranks of the Democrats who will support Ike again.

He sums it up in the words of a Los Angeles Democrat who said to him: "I voted for a change in 1952, but I don't like what I got."

Why doesn't he like what he got?
 Well, the Eisenhower administration, in general, has to practice common sense, moderation, middle-of-the-road policies because these are the policies of the Eisenhower administration.

If people don't like these policies, this must be the reason: They don't want common sense. They want MIRACLES.

Let's be frank about it. There isn't universal satisfaction with present conditions.

Farmers harried by lower prices for what they have to sell and higher prices for what they have to buy, want the miracle of higher prices in the face of over-supply in the form of ever-mounting subsidized surpluses.

Business people, harried by rising costs of labor and raw materials, want the miracle of better profits in a time of steadily narrowing margins between costs and selling prices.

Working people, harried by the rising prices that HAVE to follow steadily rising wages (wages average about 67 per cent of all costs) want the miracle of more goods and services for their paycheck.

So—
 Not getting those desired things, which are impossible of attainment because there is no such thing as something for nothing—
 People are unhappy—that is, the people who want miracles are unhappy.

What is wrong?
 I don't know positively, but I think we have fallen into the delusion that we can have everything we want by the simple process of passing a law. Unfortunately, it isn't as simple as that.

REAL prosperity, I think, comes only in those occasional golden periods of BALANCED production when everybody is able to exchange what he produces for the things that other people produce on a fair and equal basis (if you make hats you can exchange your hats for the shoes your neighbor makes on such a fair basis that the more hats you make the more shoes you can have.)

Getting back to the promises of this piece, the Democrats—if they win in November—will be no more able in the years between 1956 and 1960 to satisfy these yearnings for miracles than the Republicans have been in the years from 1952 to 1956, which by all the modern rules have been among the most prosperous years in our history.

So—
 If that is true—
 Come 1960 the Democrats will be thrown out again and the Republicans will be put in again.

Where will it all end?
 It can end happily ONLY when people cease to expect political miracles and settle down to a reasonable basis of common sense and sound economics.

Gibson Faces New Charge

COOS BAY — Coos County authorities added a new charge Friday to the record of Ernest Leroy Gibson, 29, whose capture ended one of the most extensive man-hunts in this area in years.

He was surprised by police early Friday morning while trying to nap in a car on a Coos Bay street. That was after he had evaded capture for 72 hours in the brush-covered hills of Cape Arago and the nearby Seven Devils area.

Gibson was arraigned here Saturday afternoon on a new charge of larceny resulting from a car theft. He was held under $5,000 bail. In Eugene, meanwhile, Lane County authorities filed to hold order on the prisoner.

A Bend taxi driver, Loyal Van Dyke, has accused Gibson of kidnapping him in Eugene and forcing him to drive on to the coast, after hiring the cab in Bend.

Gibson already was facing a life sentence as an habitual criminal when he broke out of the Lane County jail in Albany Sept. 7, with three other potential life termers as companions. Only one of the four, Earl Junior Bonnie, 31, Silverton, remains at large. One was captured near Los Angeles and the other drowned in the Willamette River near Salem.

CHICAGO — The mother of a 1-month-old baby, kidnaped but returned safely, said Saturday she would "stick by" the baby's father, despite the disclosure he is married to another woman.

The other woman, however, said she had "no pity" for her husband, the father of her five children.

The unusual incident had its beginning Thursday night. Then, the baby, Ronald Bucher, was taken from his home. Police arrested Mrs. Gladys Bynum, 24, as the woman who had taken the child.

She told officers she had deceived her husband into thinking she was pregnant by padding her figure and buying maternity wear. She completed the deception by taking the child.

A grand jury reportedly voted a true bill charging Mrs. Bynum with kidnaping.

Soon after the reported indictment, Mrs. Joan Paterimos, 27, came to the state's attorney's office and reported the baby's father who had tried vainly to avoid news photographers, was her husband. She said she recognized his picture in a newspaper.

He had left her and their children 22 months ago, she said. Faced with her accusations Paterimos admitted he was never legally married to the kidnaped baby's mother, Miss Lois Bucher, 21. Paterimos was charged with adultery, child abandonment and non-support.

Miss Bucher said: "I love him and I'll stick by him. He's been good to me."

Mrs. Paterimos had different sentiments. "He's no good," she declared. "He hasn't supported us. I have no pity for him. Send him to jail."

New Polio Serum Told

CINCINNATI — A University of Cincinnati scientist Saturday announced he has developed a new polio vaccine to be taken by mouth which is expected to produce long-term—perhaps lifetime—immunity against the dread disease.

Dr. Albert B. Sabin, professor of research pediatrics in the College of Medicine, made the report to a select group of scientists meeting in Cincinnati. The Cincinnati Times-Star carried it Saturday in an exclusive, copyrighted story.

Dr. Sabin said a single dose of the new vaccine will produce immunity against all three major strains of polio virus. He said the vaccine has proven safe after extensive tests on animals and humans and is now ready for mass testing on an international basis.

Worldwide tests of the new vaccine will begin next year in four foreign countries as well as in the United States.

Dr. Sabin said the vaccine is the first effective oral preventive against polio. He said it works in persons who have already received Salk vaccine.

Dr. Sabin's report indicated arrangements have already been made with a leading pharmaceutical house to produce the vaccine in a pilot plant. Production, the report said, will be cheap—the vaccine itself costing less than the cherry syrup vehicle by which it is administered.

Doctor Dies During Hunt

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
 One deer hunter died of natural causes, another was seriously wounded and a third was found safe in Oregon Saturday.

Dr. C. O. Wells, 54-year-old Hillsboro physician, died of a heart attack in the early morning hours at a camp at Indian Crossing on the Imnaha River in Northeast Oregon. He became the ninth hunter to suffer a fatal heart seizure since the deer season opened on Sept. 29.

State police said the death was reported by Wells' companion, J. J. Millett of Hillsboro, at a camp about 65 miles southeast of Enterprise.

The wounding occurred Saturday at a Coos Bay service station, where a car carrying five hunters pulled in for gasoline. Police said a .30 caliber rifle in the back seat discharged accidentally. The bullet passed through the front seat and struck Jay Beebe of Bunker Hill in the back, lodging in his left thigh. Beebe was reported in fair condition at McAuley Hospital in Coos Bay.

John Schroeder, 40-year-old Medford mill worker, was found safe by another hunter Saturday morning in the Klawwop Butte area southeast of Bend. Schroeder became lost Friday and spent the night in the open, suffering no ill effects.

Jaycettes Present Fifty Dollars To UF-RC Drive

The Klamath County Jaycettes Friday presented a check for $50 to Noel Flynn, chairman of the 1957 United Fund-Red Cross campaign.

Flynn praised the group for its responsibility to the needs of the community, and told members that the check from the small organization of about a dozen members represented "a real sacrifice."

Jaycettes also have undertaken the solicitation of Klamath Falls beauticians during the fund drive.

Flynn also praised the 15 additional Klamath Falls firms who were awarded Operation Fair Share Oscars for reporting nearly 100 per cent employee contributions of an hour's pay per month per employee.

At the close of Friday's meeting, Flynn reported a total of $34,816 in the United Fund coffers.

During the meeting, he told volunteers that work is being done by division chairmen, unit chair-

Anti-Fire Week Set In Nation

In observance of President Eisenhower's proclamation of National Fire Prevention Week, October 7-13, Colonel Samuel C. Grashio, Commander of the 408th Fighter Group at the Klamath Falls Air Base, has appointed Fire Marshal Major O. D. Whitten, Fire Chief E. R. Deatherage and Fire Prevention Inspector Assistant Chief J. C. Webb to organize and promote a Fire Prevention Week program.

Colonel Grashio advocates educating base personnel, both military and civilian, in good housekeeping practices as a primary factor in maintaining a safe and fire free installation.

The goal of fire prevention and protection programs, Deatherage said, is the total prevention of any loss of life or property by fire. Although this goal is as yet unattainable, measures to prevent the outbreak and serious spread of fire, and to promptly detect and extinguish fires, are being steadily developed or improved, he added.

To augment this goal the Air Force encourages reciprocal aid agreements for fire protection between Air Defense Command installations, such as the one here in Klamath Falls, and nearby communities.

Such an agreement has been arranged between the Air Force Fire Department and the numerous local fire fighting organizations. This organization is known as the Mutual Firefighting Assistance Forces and the chief officers of the departments which are parties to the group meet every three months to coordinate their efforts to reduce fire losses.

When, in the opinion of the chief officer of any member agency, assistance is required in the immediate area of his responsibility, Deatherage explained, he transmits his request to a central fire alarm station and specifies how many men and what type of equipment he needs.

The central fire alarm operator will then call upon the nearest fire department to respond with the type of assistance requested. If such a move endangers the community from which the help comes, equipment from other areas is moved up to protect that zone.

Chief Deatherage reminded everyone in the community to consider the slogan for this year's National Fire Prevention Week: "Don't Give Fire A Place To Start."

Third Missing Flier Walks Out Of Wilds

SEATTLE — The third of four airmen missing two days after the collision of two jet interceptors over the rugged Olympic peninsula walked out to safety Saturday about 40 miles from where the F89H Scorpions crashed.

1st Lt. Jim B. Paschall, 22, Paradise, Tex., a radar observer on one of the planes, telephoned word of his survival to his home station at Paine Air Force Base, near Everett, Wash.

Paschall emerged about midday from the peninsula wilderness near the little community of Brinnon, on Hood Canal. A Coast Guard helicopter was sent to pick him up and return him to Paine.

Paine Air Force headquarters said Paschall gave no details of his experience but it was presumed he was in good shape for him to find his way out of the rugged Olympic mountain country.

Still missing was the other radar observer, 1st Lt. Robert L. Canup Jr., 25, Salisbury, N. C.

Earlier, a Navy helicopter had sighted wreckage of one of the two fighter-interceptor planes on the east side of lowering Mt. Olympus.

Safe and reunited with their families after being located and rescued Friday were 1st Lt. Eugene A. Hamby, 26, Hillsboro, Ore., and 2nd Lt. George W. Deer, 22, Meadville, Miss., pilots. All three survivors parachuted from the planes after the 400-mile-an-hour collision.

An intensive ground and air search continued for Canup.

Deer told interviewers both planes spun out of control after the collision.

Friday he heard searching planes and was able finally to attract the attention of one with a mirror. A helicopter arrived two hours later.

Hamby was greeted by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. U. J. Hamby, of Hillsboro, when he reached Paine Air Force Base Friday night.

West States Jobs Slated

WASHINGTON — The Reclamation Bureau Saturday announced an advance schedule for calling bids on about 306 million dollars worth of construction in western states.

Many of the contracts to be let will extend over a number of years and be financed by annual appropriations. However, these are the backbone of a 174 million dollar construction program being undertaken during the year ending next June 30.

The annual advance construction bulletin issued Saturday lists dates and summary information for expected bid calls for 86 major bureau projects through June.

The bureau's major listing of scheduled bid calls by states and projects, with months in parentheses includes:

WASHINGTON—Columbia Basin project, (October) 50 miles of laterals north of Smyrna; (January) 85 miles of laterals and wasteways and 8 small pumping plants northwest of Moses; and (March) 50 miles of laterals and wasteways northeast of Beverly and 7 miles of Wahluke canal south of Othello.

OREGON—Rogue River basin project, (October) Howard Prairie dam 27 miles from Ashland and (April) Green Springs power plant and Keene Creek dam, near Ashland.

IDAHO—Rathdrum prairie project, (March) Hayden Lake pumping plant and distribution system near Coeur D'Alene.

Man Believed Lake Victim

C. C. Kelly, a 72-year-old retired Klamath Falls contractor, was presumed drowned today after his upturned fishing boat was found Saturday morning on the shore of Lake of the Woods and a search failed to locate him.

Kelly was last seen alive Friday evening trolling for fish on the choppy, wind-swept lake by friends who had yelled to him and asked how many fish he had caught.

The acquaintances told state police officers that Kelly held up three fingers to indicate three fish. His outboard motorboat was found Saturday morning by Herman Darley of Stayton, Oregon, who said he found three fish on a stringer in the upside-down boat.

Police immediately launched a search of the area, the lakeshore and the victim's cabin but failed to find a trace of Kelly.

Dragging operations were scheduled to start this morning for the body.

State To Get Wildlife Money

WASHINGTON — Washington and Oregon will receive nearly one million dollars of the $21,062,000 federal money apportioned to aid in the development of state wildlife and sports fishery projects in the year ending next June 30, Secretary of the Interior Seaton announced Saturday.

The allocations will be on the matching basis of one state dollar for each three federal dollars. The federal funds come from excise taxes on sporting arms and ammunition, fishing rods, creels, reels, artificial lures, baits and flies.

Oregon will receive $410,673 for wildlife resources projects and $103,599 for sports fishery projects. Washington's share will be $349,256 for wildlife and $97,344 for fisheries.

Saturday Final Registration Day

PORTLAND — Saturday was the statewide registration deadline for the Nov. 6 general election.

The final registration day came in Portland as election officials announced that a few outdated booklets had been distributed by mistake to sign-up booths at some fire stations. The booklets erroneously stated that no registration was needed for persons who voted in the 1952 general election.

Staff Study Sets Fight By Politicos

WASHINGTON — Political warfare broke out Saturday among members of a special Senate committee set up to study disarmament as an aid to world peace.

Sen. Humphrey (D-Minn), chairman of the group of six Republicans and six Democrats, released a special staff study on disarmament and at the same time supported the proposal of Adlai Stevenson that this country take the lead in moves toward halting tests of large nuclear weapons such as H-bombs.

Sen. Bridges (R-NH), protested that he and other members of the disarmament group had not seen the staff study or been consulted about its release. He said Humphrey's action "instead of fostering bipartisanship in foreign policy, in effect undermines it."

Bridges expressed doubt as to "the propriety of releasing staff studies bearing upon serious international problems without a meeting and careful consideration of them by the subcommittee."

MUCH TROUBLE
 "Such a practice can be productive of much trouble," he said "especially if it becomes involved in the heat of a political campaign."

At the same time Bridges backed President Eisenhower, Vice President Nixon and other Republicans who have taken issue with Stevenson's suggestions for halting H-bomb tests.

"Our preparations and tests in nuclear defense should go on to insure maximum progress in technology and a strong national security," Bridges said.

Humphrey contended it would "not be necessary to rely on the Soviet's word alone" that an agreement on banning H-bomb tests was being observed.

"Nor would such an agreement, to be effective, require an elaborate inspection system," he said, adding:

"Our detecting methods are presently located outside the Soviet Union. Many other nations have means to detect large nuclear explosions wherever they occur.

"Any violation of an agreement, therefore, be almost instantly known to the world at large."

DIFFICULTIES
 The staff study released by Humphrey cited numerous difficulties facing disarmament proposals from both political and technical viewpoints.

It urged that some system for international control of intercontinental or long-range missiles, capable of carrying nuclear warheads, be worked out promptly.

"Some country is quite sure, within the relatively near future, to complete a successful test of the ICBM," the report said.

"In the event the disarmament agreement were dissolved or broken the country having completed the test and having carefully preserved its research and development data would go into production of the weapons far ahead of any other countries."

The report also noted that it would be almost impossible to detect hidden stockpiles of nuclear and other mass destruction weapons under any disarmament agreements.

81 YEARS OF INDECISION

ROANOKE, Va. (UP) — Mrs. Maude Dillon, 81, said Saturday she was going to vote this fall for the first time in her life and she would cast her ballot for President Eisenhower. "I never could decide who to vote for before," she said.
