Just what is the job of the County Judge, Mr. Mack?

"Oregon Blue Book says... 'The county court is composed of a county judge and two commissioners. It acts upon all bills contracted for the county; has charge of roads and bridges and their construction, improvement and repair; manages county-owned buildings and property; levies all county taxes; appoints election officials; establishes election precincts and designates polling places; issues rural dance hall licenses; passes upon applications to sell liquor outside cities and towns, and fills temporary vacancies in the legislature. Members of the county court are also members of the county public welfare commission which administers the old-age pension law and federal assistance program.'"

"Money collected by the County Treasurer and deposited by the county court for the fiscal year 1955-56 amounted to $2,990,440.29."
