"Shorties" Get Attention At Last From Top Designers

Top designers have become increasingly sympathetic to the problems of the petite figure (short-and-stumpy in the wrong style) and are concerning themselves more and more with creating styles especially for her.

Actually a short girl can wear very nearly any fashion if it's proportioned for her. And it's that big "if" that's so frustrating. Confronted with a limited selection, the short woman in order to buy the style she wants, will often resort to drastic alterations. Trying to remodel the dress to her size it is usually cut down in all of the wrong places; and the whacking at shoulders, waistline and sleeves still leaves the victim with a misfit.

What she really needs are clothes designed especially for her, properly proportioned through waistline and shoulders and sleeves, yet incorporating the season's top fashion trends.

The models left, are wearing scaled-to-the-short-figure dresses, made for the small with shorter waistlines and styled to achieve a flattering illusion of height and slenderness. The one on the left is of red-and-black wool jersey. A minimum of trim accents the trim sleek lines with a touch of velvet at the neck and sleeves. For fit and "feel" it's the answer to the little maiden's prayer — and a look in the mirror is a boost to her ego.

The same basic changes are noted in the sheer wool town dress at the right. The mock bolero outlined in black braid gives a "lift" to the figure and to the wearer.

ROSE MEMEO, whose engagement to Charles H. Cobun was recently announced by the bride-to-be's mother, Mrs. Clementina Memeo, Mount Shasta. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cobun, Napa. Rose is a graduate of Mount Shasta High School, and her fiance was graduated from high school in Napa. Both are presently employed in Mount Shasta, where they plan to wed next spring.

Saddle Club Meeting At Winema

The Klamath Saddle Club welcomed and initiated Mary Britton as a new club member during a recent dinner meeting in the Empire Room of the Winema Hotel. Hostesses were Vi Ruge and Vi Hill.

After the ceremonies, the regular meeting was called to order, during which Ernie Read, Bessie Lilly and Audrey Herrick were appointed to make arrangements for this year's annual Christmas party — always an important date on the club calendar.

A dinner party at the club house was the social event for September, with Dottie Poole, Dorothy Kirkpatrick and Donna Abner serving as hostesses. Members and guests enjoyed an excellent dinner and special entertainment.

Two home-baked cakes were given as door prizes.

TIGHT SCHEDULE CUTS MCKAY VISIT

LAKEVIEW — Time changes were necessary in the recent Lakeview coffee hours honoring Mrs. Douglas McKay because of the McKays' crowded schedule. Although coffee hours had been stepped up half an hour, the guest of honor expressed her appreciation for, and amazement at the presence of so many young mothers who had to get baby sitters after receiving late-hour telephoned notice of the earlier-than-planned appearance of Mrs. McKay.

The first coffee hour was shortly after Mrs. McKay's arrival in the morning, when Mrs. Rodney Harlan and Mrs. Ray Harlan were co-hostesses to about 25 guests at the Ray Harlan home.

After the noon luncheon at the Hotel Lakeview, where Mrs. McKay shared honors with her husband, she made her second coffee appearance of the day when she met with more Lakeview women at the home of Mrs. Louis Linville. Mrs. Forrest E. Cooper assisted Mrs. Linville with telephoning announcements of the time change, and with serving.

The McKays left Lakeview too early for Mrs. McKay to attend a 3 p.m. coffee at the home of Mrs. Robert Adams Jr. But before leaving Lakeview, Mrs. McKay visited briefly with the late afternoon hostess — to express her appreciation for the arrangements made in her honor, and to offer regrets for not being in Lakeview long enough to attend. She also left a special message of greeting to the guests who missed seeing her as planned.

Mrs. Eva Arthur, Lakeview, made advance arrangements for entertainment of the former cabinet wife.
