

Game Group Sends Plans For Deer Study To Solon

REDDING — Members of the Northern Counties Wildlife Protective Association have forwarded the following recommendations to State Senator Arthur H. Breed Jr., concerning the forthcoming legislative study of the California Fish and Game Department.

Charles Bull, president of the NCWPA, expresses the opinion that the study will deal principally with the migratory deer herds when considering the immediate Northern California area. He suggests that the committee's study should encompass the following points with relation to Northern California:

1. Present policies of the Fish and Game Department in the management of these herds. (a) Population study for the past 10 years based upon figures of woodsmen, landowners and hunters who have had occasion to observe and study these herds during this period. We need something besides Fish and Game Department statistics. (b) Methods of computing deer counts, as used by the department, whether it is practical to manage these deer herds on the same basis as those used in other states in which habitat and other vital conditions are different.

2. A complete investigation of range and habitat conditions. (a) Feasibility of allowing livestock to graze on the winter range of migratory herds. Many deer often funnel into small winter ranges from large summer feeding areas. (b) What's being done to improve range conditions to provide more feed for these herds so as to increase our deer population rather than cut down the size of the herds to fit a so-called condition of range depletion?

3. What is being done with Pittman-Robertson and Dingle-Johnson allotments in federal funds? Are these funds being used for true conservation? (a) Why not use these funds for range improvement? (b) Why not build more check dams to provide more water and lessen flood dangers?

4. A complete investigation of the method of computing deer kill. (a) Pick up all tags from the department offices and count them by districts. (b) Is the Conservation Education program being used as a propaganda machine to further Fish and Game Department policies? Our association pledges full cooperation with your committee in every way possible.

We have a wealth of information compiled and would like to have your committee hold a hearing in the Redding area some time after the close of deer season.

We are also prepared to take the committee on a field trip which, we feel, would be most valuable in giving its members a good background on the deer problem.

Nursery Set Up In Tulelake For Children Of Workers

TULELAKE—Plans for the operation of a free nursery for children of migrant workers in the Tulelake Basin were outlined Friday morning, October 11, during a coffee hour at the Tulelake Community Presbyterian Church. The nursery will be started Monday, October 14 at the Presbyterian Church.

Present were 14 persons, representing six organizations and four churches. Details will be worked out by a steering committee including Mrs. Burton Hoyle, chairman, representing the guild of the Tulelake Community Presbyterian Church; Mrs. A. E. Ryckman, American Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. Isabelle Hannon, the altar society of Holy Cross Catholic Church and the Rev. Roy Pennington, pastor of the Full Gospel Church. Mrs. Ryckman will serve as contact for those interested in assisting. Her phone number is 7-1031.

Organizations and churches who wish to cooperate are asked to furnish volunteer help and food for at least one full day. Someone will be present at the church at 8 a.m. on Monday to receive the children. All farmers are asked to inform workers of the service, for which no charge is to be made. Parents will be asked to answer questions on parent's names, names of children and approximate place where they will be working that day for notification in case of accident or illness. Information for formulas, brands or type of milk fed to infants and other food used will also be needed. Children will be fed two meals a day, one at noon, the second at 6 p.m. The nursery will remain open as long as necessary. A minimum of 12 children must be registered to keep the nursery open.

Top Engraver Cites Progress

"More progress has been made in the photo engraving industry in the last 10 years than in all the rest of the 50 years it has been in existence," Roy R. Ellison, international representative for the International Photo Engravers Union of North America, said Saturday in Klamath Falls.

ROY R. ELLISON

Ellison stopped over for his first visit with E. G. Hedlund, Herald and News engraving room foreman, and was very complimentary in his remarks about the engraving department and the mechanical work done by the newspaper.

"A good many of the intermediate size plants do pretty junk work," Ellison said, "but very obviously the men in your mechanical departments take a great deal of pride in the product they turn out."

Ellison's territory reaches from Vancouver, B.C. to San Francisco on down to San Diego. He also calls on Salt Lake City and Phoenix.

"I arrived in town on Friday night along with hundreds of duck hunters," Ellison said. "The lobby of the Willard Hotel was bristling with guns."

He credits the improvements in photography with making possible most of the big advancements in photo engraving work.

"Everybody is talking about color," he added. "We see considerable advancement in color for the intermediate size plants."

Snow Delays Ski Lift Work

MOUNT SHASTA—A surplus of snow has halted work until next spring on the lower ski lift being built by the Mt. Shasta Ski Bowl.

The heaviest early-season storms in many years have left two feet of snow at Panther Meadows, where the lift starts, and more than four feet where it ends. The area ranges in altitude from 7,800 to 9,850 feet.

Bowl Secretary George Schrader said the Panther Meadows Lodge would not be built until next year and that the entire project has now been set for completion by September 1, 1958. A second lift is planned for 1959.

Schrader said also that plans had been dropped to install a rope tow at Panther Meadows and that the only skiing area would be that at Snowman's Hill at the base of the mountain.

Bids for construction of the lodge have been rejected as being too high and new bids have been asked for December 1.

Some work is going ahead on the mountain, however. Grading is expected to be completed this fall on the last eight miles of new road leading into Panther Meadows. Work also is going ahead on grading a 300-car parking lot.

Since much of the work consists of filling, the contractor has been helped by the heavy rains and snow.

Thirty one of the 23 bases included in the original lift plans have been completed. Still to be built also are the bases and the terminus at the upper end.

Thursday evening, due to an excess of mail, one of the sacks was left outside padlocked to the storage box.

The sack was cut open, the contents scattered and papers about. Two packages had been opened and contents taken. Value of items stolen has not as yet been determined. Further investigation is being made by Chief of Police Al Widner of Montague.

Adult Photography Class Hoped For

MOUNT SHASTA — A class for adult camera fans here now appears to have a chance to become a reality, after two years of effort on the part of a few enthusiasts. Orneal Kooyers, Mount Shasta High School principal, stated that the school had equipment for such a class, and that it might be organized under the junior college setup.

There are several serious camera fans in the area who would welcome an opportunity of affiliating with such a group. Many advanced amateurs have fine cameras, and would like instructions in practical photographic steps.
