Lost Child Found Dead

LAFOLLETTE, Tenn. (AP) — The body of 3-year-old Minnie Haun was found yesterday at the base of a cliff in the rugged Cumberland Mountains of East Tennessee, about six miles from her home.

The child, missing since last Tuesday, had been the object of a widespread search. She apparently survived several near-freezing nights before she died Friday or Saturday.

Coroner Jimmy Jones of Campbell County said death was caused by exposure or starvation. Two men found the body several hours after other searchers stumbled across some of the clothing the child was wearing when she became lost from her mother and an older sister.

"Thank God, our prayers have been answered," the child's father Frank Haun said when a searching party shouted that Minnie was alive.

A correction—carrying the news of death—soon echoed down the slopes. "So be it, It's God's will," the father said.

Old Plane Wreck Found

EUGENE (AP) — Police Monday identified plane wreckage found by a hunter as that of an Army bomber that crashed 18 years ago. Police said the wreckage first was found many years ago. Authorities for a time thought that it might have been the wreckage of another plane which vanished over Oregon and never has been found. The wrecked bomber was found in the Nimrod area, east of Eugene.
