Workers Spot Red Satellite

Sputnik or the rocket head from which it was launched was reportedly seen by at least six employees in the Big Bend project below Kato shortly after 5 o'clock Monday morning.

Norman Erickson said that he and five other construction workers spotted the bright object streaking across the sky in a north-south direction at approximately 5:20 a.m.

Erickson said attention to the object was called when one workman noted what appeared to be just another star moving across the sky at a high rate of speed.
