

Mideast Crisis Report

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — There is a widespread feeling here that the Turkish-Syrian crisis is not as important as what is behind it.

Few delegates believe that war is imminent — unless it should come by accident, touched off by some unplanned clash against the background of inflamed passions.

Many delegates see the crisis as a situation manufactured in Moscow to further an all-out Soviet drive for domination of the Middle East.

They are worried because Soviet leaders in words and action make it clear that the cold war is back at its worst — with all its pressures, threats and subversion.

The situation is undeniably serious. But because the delegates feel the crisis is not really genuine, it has not produced the same sense of urgency as was prevalent last year when the Assembly dealt with the invasion of Egypt by Britain, France and Israel.

There was real fear of a global war when the Soviet Union threatened to send volunteers, as it called them, to Egypt.

This sense of urgency was present also during the crucial days of the Korean War, when it threatened to explode into a third world war.

Today the Soviet Union is trying hard to make out a convincing case that war is near and that the United States is promoting it. But the General Assembly has shown no inclination toward haste.

Delegates are aware that while the issue was brought before the U.N. by Syria, it was done so in close cooperation with the Soviet Union. Western diplomats even speculate that the crisis is a smokescreen to cover a Soviet takeover in Syria.

It is obvious that the Soviet Union intends to use the General Assembly as a forum for new attacks against the West, particularly against the United States. The Russians attack Western imperialism, Zionism, NATO, the Baghdad Pact and the Eisenhower Doctrine as causes of Middle East tension. At the same time they praise Arab nationalism and urge noninterference in the internal affairs of Arab countries.

This line, coupled with the Soviet propaganda attacks on pro-Western countries in the Middle East, apparently is intended to woo Arab support while turning the people against any governments which remain friendly to the West.

The main problem of the United States and other non-Communist countries at the moment is to master a strategy which will turn the tables on the Russians and show their real role in the Middle East.

Several possible courses of action have been suggested.

Syria has indicated it wants a U.N. commission to investigate the massing of Turkish troops along the Syrian border.

King Saud of Saudi Arabia is trying to mediate the dispute.

Canada's Lester B. Pearson and British Labor Leader Hugh Gaitskell have suggested that the U.N. send a border patrol, similar to the Middle East emergency force, to the troubled area.

There are other possibilities which might be used either independently or in combination with each other. For example, the U.N. might:

1. Offer military, financial and economic aid to any country in the area that becomes the victim of an attack.
2. Call on all member countries to stop sending arms to the area and to avoid interfering in the internal affairs of any country.
3. Urge a meeting of the heads of the governments of the United States, Britain, France and Russia to seek a solution.

This last is being urged by the Soviet Union. The United States and Britain are cool toward it.

Some U.N. diplomats have expressed private views that the present Turkish-Syrian crisis may have been initiated by the Soviet Union at least partly to demonstrate a need for big power talks.

Surgery Aids Chiloquin Boy

CHILOQUIN—Richard (Ricky) Lockwood, fourth grade son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Mitchell, now stands a good chance of living a completely normal life, according to the report received Tuesday from San Francisco where the boy has recently undergone brain surgery.

Ricky has had six periods of hospitalization in Portland during the past two and a half years following spinal meningitis. Twice the family had car trouble on the way from Chiloquin to Portland and the boy was in a critical condition by the time he finally reached the hospital.

Two months ago Klamath Falls doctors recommended a specialist in San Francisco. The Mitchells could not raise the money required for such treatment or operations as he might state were needed. Klamath Falls and Chiloquin residents helped with the collection of the money and Ricky was rushed south only to find that the doctors wanted him to be showing certain periodic symptoms before they made a decision.

Ricky was returned to Chiloquin where he enrolled in school and two weeks later the mercy plane from Medford flew into Chiloquin's airport to pick up the boy and his mother and fly them to the Bay Area. There it was thought that medicines might help Ricky but during the middle of last week his condition worsened and they performed emergency surgery and told the Mitchells that if they had waited much longer the boy would have died.

The youngster will have a permanent forehead scar but he stands an excellent chance now of living a perfectly normal life and the Mitchells have written asking that all the people who have helped them be thanked via the Herald and News.
