Courtroom Remodeling Plan Okayed

The Klamath County Court has authorized the architectural firm of Morrison and Howard to study the existing courthouse law library with a view toward modifying portions of the library to accommodate another courtroom to be used in the hearing of circuit court cases.

The architects will study a plan in company with Circuit Judge David R. Vandenberg and will submit recommendations and approximate costs to the court.

Judge Vandenberg recently told County Judge Charles Mack and Commissioners Jerry Rajnus and Ed Gowen that the back log of cases scheduled for circuit court hearing is continually rising, and that visiting judges would be available to hear some of the cases which have been long delayed if the necessary courtroom space could be provided.

It is anticipated that the visiting magistrates would hear the equity cases and other measures which normally do not require the calling of a jury. Judge Vandenberg pointed out that the outside judges cannot be brought here at this time because they do not have a location in which to hear the cases.

In other county court business this week the directors of the Ward Park and Recreation District asked if the county could transfer to the recreation district approximately 15 acres of land located in the vicinity of the Klamath County Nursing Home. The property would be used for future recreational development within the bounds of the park district.

The court declined to transfer title to the requested land on grounds that the county wishes to retain the property in one larger tract rather than divide it into numerous smaller holdings.

In another matter, Lester Gardner asked the court if there would be any county objection if he converted the old "97 Club" into a public dance hall. The club was burned out more than a year ago and was located at the intersection of U.S. Highway 97 and the Green-springs Highway.

The court advised Gardner that there would be no objection on the part of the county unless establishment of a dance hall at that location were objected to by numerous persons in petition form.

In other action the court received word from Senator Harry Boivin to the effect that court members would receive copies of all bills introduced during the current special session of the Legislature.

Scoutmaster Award Winner

James D. Harpole, Klamath Falls Boy Scout executive has announced that a silver antelope award was given in Portland recently to a Warm Springs scoutmaster.

He is Irving Shepard, who is the second man from this area to receive the award, Harpole said. The first was the late Dr. F. C. Adams, Klamath Falls.

Harpole added that Shepard is known here and has appeared with his troop on TV, performing authentic Indian dances.

Jet Pilots Are Encountering First Space Travel Problems

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
NEW YORK (AP)—Human space travel has already partially begun.

Our jet pilots are flying so high that much of the earth's air is beneath them. They are already meeting and conquering some major problems involved in trips to the Moon or Mars.

Human volunteers in special experiments are producing answers as to whether, and how, humans can stand greater and more severe challenges higher in the void of space.

But don't fall for the pitch of some promoter offering you bargain-price reserved tickets to the Moon by 1960 or 1965.

Indeed, there are some scientists and experts who say space travel is forever out of the question—men couldn't stand it, or be protected well enough.

There's a middle opinion that human journeys into space are a very long way off—perhaps 100 years earlier than the end of this century.

But enthusiasts say the first space Columbus—John or Ivan—has already been born or now is even in school. They see initial space journeys within five to 10 years.

Jet pilots are flying in such thin air that they must carry their own oxygen, use pressurized cabins and special suits, or else their blood would boil at these heights. Their planes are overcoming problems of heat from friction at high speed in the air they meet. The pilots are experiencing sensations of no gravity—weightlessness—at times in their flights.

Space flight means more or most of the same problems, intensified. But with new problems added.

Can human life withstand the radiation men will meet in space from cosmic rays, and from intense ultraviolet light and X-rays from the sun? Our blanket of atmosphere blocks out most of these rays which might quickly kill or damage the unprotected body.

Our air also burns up most of the meteors whizzing in at us from space. How crowded is space with this cosmic dust, or with big meteor chunks traveling faster than any cannon shell, and just as lethal if they barreled through a pressurized space cruiser?

—bumpy with sensitive instruments and radios, will report what these hazards are, or what unsuspected dangers may exist.

Under International Geophysical Year agreement, both nations are pledged to tell the world what their baby moons learn.

With that knowledge, scientists and engineers might devise materials and methods to safeguard human astronauts physically.

Monkeys have gone up 90 miles high inside U. S. rockets. Russians 99 report sending dogs 130 miles high. Just in the last few days, a Soviet scientist said a next step could be to put dogs or other animals in baby moons, with instrument recording and reporting what happens to them.

Such animal trials could be arranged humanely to prevent suffering. But the real step would be human volunteers testing the practicality of space travel.

Could people psychologically withstand the peculiar challenges of space? Long trips mean a few persons cooped together in probably cramped quarters for days or months, in perhaps continuous peril, with sudden emergencies calling for quick, decisive, cooperative actions.

Picked men manning atomic submarines operate under similar conditions, and their answer is yes.

Women might be the first choice because, say male psychologists, they can tolerate boredom and monotonous tasks better. Another suggestion is to put space crews into suspended animation on long journeys with special drugs while automatic controls or signals from earth control the flight to Mars.

It seems certain that the first astronauts will be carefully hand-picked—maybe one in thousands—on considerations of health, psychology, training and skills.

Dean Tells Need For Study On Health Problems Of Aged

CLEVELAND (AP)—A medical school dean said today that "a serious scandal" may soon develop if medical schools don't do more to meet the increasing health problems of older people.

This was the view of Dr. Chauncey D. Leake, assistant medical school dean at Ohio State University, at the 10th annual meeting of the Gerontological Society. Gerontology is the scientific study of old age.

"Medical schools," he said, "have the prime responsibility in preparing their graduates for a tremendous jump in geriatric practice.

"Unless this responsibility is promptly met, there may come a serious scandal in medical affairs which could adversely affect the traditionally high esteem in which people hold the medical profession."

Leake said the challenge to meet the problem results from the success of modern medicine in lengthening life.

Old people, he said, "do not know how to take care of themselves and no one else is prepared to do so, either school or home."

The training in medical schools for treating older people, Leake said, could become a major part of the effort of men who plan to go into general medical practice.

"The general practitioner may aid in direct preparation of his patients for old age, by regular physical examinations, judicious counseling, and by specific pro-
